Edison Not So Well.
Voice of Dumb Millions.
One Frank Briton.
Not All Slaves.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

UNSATISFACTORY NEWS comes concerning the health of Thomas A. Edison. His complete recovery, it seems, was taken for granted prematurely. Doctors yesterday afternoon reported:

"The past 24 hours have not produced much change in Mr. Edison's condition. Compared to a week ago he has declined."

THE DARKNESS which comes to us all in time has no terrors for Edison. He will close his eyes knowing that he has lighted the world for all of its students and workers, having made the greatest gift to humanity since the words:

"Let there be light."

He asks "freedom for India, but for India as a valued partner of Great Britain, not held by force, but by the silken cord of love."

NICE WORDS, but the silken cord of love is easily snapped, and Gandhi, who, with Hindu gentleness and suavity, was laying down an ultimatum for the British, well knows it. If he goes back with a British answer unsatisfactory to his followers, blood will flow, and a great deal of it.

ON THE OTHER hand, if the British say to India, which is unthinkable, "Go in peace and do as you please," conditions in a month will be 10,000 times worse than they are now, and still worse every month thereafter.

AN ABLE BOSTON merchant says:

"The worst of our troubles are over, and our greatest remaining difficulty is the attitude of bankers and others that lend money. When they get over their fears, their damaging desire to have safes filled with ready cash, business will revive."

ON THE OTHER HAND, one of the ablest American bankers said yesterday:

"Citizens, frightened, are injuring themselves and the country by withdrawing money and hiding it. It is not the bankers' safes that are filled with cash so much as deposit boxes, old mattresses and other hiding places."

THERE DOES EXIST foolish timidity among lenders, and harmful hoarding among citizens. But business IS improving, the country is 100 per cent solvent, with credit unlimited, and more than five billions in gold accumulated. When the people want better times and get ready to prove that they want them, they can have them.

GOV. RITCHIE, of Maryland, opposes government ownership of public utilities, saying:

Many that compare the efficiency of private management with the looseness of government management here and there think the time for government ownership far removed.

However, it is an exaggeration to say that government ownership would necessarily "make us slaves of the federal government."

The government operates its postoffice, a great deal better than any private organization could do it, and postmasters, letter carriers and clerks are not exactly "slaves."

H. L. Doherty, of New York and many other cities, not discouraged by the depression, has bought the Miami Biltmore Hotel and the Miami Biltmore Country Club at Coral Gables in Florida. He says he will have the "largest, most representative club and all year sports organization ever launched in this country." It is pleasing to know that somebody keeps his courage, in the passing depression.

And it is amusing to know that today, when the greatest real estate bargains in years are available, those that would have paid three times the price a few years ago will not buy now.

A. J. CUMMINGS, British, associate editor of the London News-Chronicle, wishes to announce, borrowing an expression from us, that he has "sized us up."

To the question "What can America teach Britain in the present economic blizzard?" he answers with the one word "NOTHING."

WE ARE JUST "wallowing" through the slump, which isn't a bad description, and he refers to our "blundering, wasteful, antiquated methods of trying to keep millions of unemployed persons and their families from starving in the midst of plenty."

AN ENGLISHMAN, talking of "antiquated American methods," when a hundred American mechanics with American methods produce 10 times as many automobiles as are produced by the same number of British mechanics with British methods, makes you feel that the criticism does not cut very deeply.

We admit, however, that this British friend sees clearly when he refers to our "muddled ideas of statesmanship, confusion of counsel, lack of leadership and total absence of any practical plans for meeting a prolonged crisis."

I have just been informed that my election to the office of Judge of the County Court of Allegheny County seems assured. I am deeply appreciative of the confidence in me that the voters of the county have indicated by this splendid return. SEA FLIERS REPORTED SAFE

Moyle and Allen Found on Uninhabited Island, Says Message to Sweetheart

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The Coast Guard received a report today that Cecil A. Allen and Don Moyle, California aviators missing more than a week after a trans-Pacific flight attempt from Japan to Seattle, are safe in the Aleutian Islands.

The Coast Guard station here received a message from the naval radio on St. Paul Island in Bering Sea addressed to Miss Frances Bresson, fiancee of Moyle at Riverside, Cal.

The message said the fliers had been found safe onanu ninhabited island. No details were given in early reports. Several vessels of the Coast Guard have been combing the Aleutians westward of their base at Dutch Harbor.

BELIEVED ON SHIP

Allen and Moyle left Samushiro Beach, Northern Japan, on Mondayof last week on an attempted non-stop flight to Seattle. They were sighted about one hour after they left Tokio but were unseen after that. They were due in Seattle a week ago today.

Capt. H. D. Hinckley, commandant of the Northern Division of the Coast Guard, said the message was sent from the steamer Buriat through the St. Paul station, which relayed it to Cordova, Alaska, and thence here.

The message was signed "Don," he said, and told Miss Bresson the fliers were safe on the island and would be in Seattle September 22.

Walker, 300 Others Marooned in Fog

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Mayor Walker was on time, but the liner Bremen, on which he will sail for New York, was late today, wrapped in a fog somewhere in the channel.

The Mayor and 300 others boarded the tender which takes passengers out to the liner, but the fog forced the tender to drop her hook. The situation was not without danger, for vessels slipped past with fog horns hooting and the possibility of collision was always present. There were only emergency rations aboard the tender, but the bar was going full blast.

Maude Adams Return To Stage Reported

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Maude Adams and Otis Skinner will return to the stage shortly, appearing in Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice," it was reported today. They will tour the West and South starting in November, before opening in New York, it was declared. Miss Adams retired from the stage after notable success in 1918.

BALLOT BOXES IMPOUNDED

Ballot boxes from 38 city districts, three from Braddock and four from Homestead, were brought to the sheriff's office this afternoon. The boxes were impounded on a court order as charges of fraud and irregularities, unprecedent violence and terrorism continued in the wake of Allegheny County's most turbulent primary elections.

Other highlights were:

2—Three women beaten, kicked and intimidated in "Strip."

SIX OF PRESENT JUDGES LEAD

Six of the seven sitting judges are leading in the race for Common Pleas Court in returns from 360 districts, mostly in Pittsburgh, out of 932 districts in the county. Judge William H. McNaugher, is trailing in eighth place, while among the seven leaders is Thomas M. Marshall, fifth. City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt, Kline candidate, is behind Judge McNaugher. Judge Ambrose B. Reid is in the lead. The majority of districts outside the city unreported renders the final standing problematical.

The entire force at the disposal of the District Attorney's office was today seeking the arrest of the men believed connected with a plot to wreck Allegheny County's $1,000,000 voting machine experiment.

Higher-ups, who may have been in the scheme, which is believed to have crippled the election machinery through sabotage, are being traced. Evidence has been gathered by two county detectives and two expert mechanics working under the direct supervision of Chief of County Detectives

MANSFIELD WINNER; ANDERSON, M'ARDLE GARLAND AHEAD

By MARK SHIELDS

Returns late this afternoon moved County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern into second place in the primary election to nominate two Republican candidates for County Commissioner. He passed Senator James J. Coyne, with more than two-thirds of the districts in the county reported.

Senator William D. Mansfield, of McKeesport, who had led almost from the first returns, continued to increase his margin of victory, while County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong lagged in fourth place, though steadily gaining on Coyne.

Mansfield's decisive lead, coupled with the strong race of McGovern, furnished one of the biggest upsets in the history of Allegheny County politics. The result was a blow to the regular Republican organizations of both county and city, Mayor Kline apparently suffering another rebuke through the smashing of his councilmanic slate.

KLINE FOES LEAD

In the fight for four nominations to Pittsburgh City Council, 3 independents, Councilmen Charles Anderson and Robert Garland, and former Councilman P. J. McArdle, were leading the high men on the mayor's slate, Representative James P. Rooney and Traffic Magistrate William J. Soost. Sixth position was held by Councilman Robert Alderdice, another Kline man. John D. Houston, independent, and Councilman John M. Phillips, Kline organization, followed in that order.

In the County Commissioner race, returns from 694 districts out of 932 in the city and county gave:

Mansfield	127,004
McGovern	102,811
Coyne	99,195
Armstrong	98,978

Of these districts, 354 are in the city.

With returns from 300 of the 406 districts in the city, the councilmanic totals stood:

Rooney	54,230
Houston	51,730
Soost	55,429
Alderdice	53,044
McArdle	60,658
Garland	58,126
Phillips	41,867
Anderson	59,865

Returns from yesterday's primary of bullets, ballots, terrorism and vote theft were so slow in being reported that accurate forecast of the result in the contest for the second commissioner nomination was impossible early this afternoon.

Boards in boroughs, townships and third-class cities made slow progress tallying the huge ballot in voting districts of increased size. In some districts where the organization has been accustomed to depend for favorable results, it was assumed the returns were being purposely delayed in an effort to determine how large a machine majority was required to offset the independent uprising. Wilmerding and similar localities

KLINE LOSING COUNCILMEN

Three of the four councilmanic candidates running on the anti-Kline ticket are leading the eight major aspirants, according to unofficial returns from 300 of the city's 406 districts. The three candidates and their reported vote are:

P. J. McArdle, 60,658; Charles Anderson, incumbent, 59,865; Robert Garland, incumbent, 58,126.

The fourth "Independent" candidate for Council, John D. Houston, was running seventh, with 51,730 votes.

William J. Soost, running for Council with three others backed by Mayor Charles H. Kline, is the only one of hat group who appears to have a chance of election. He is fourth with 55,429 votes. His running mates and their vote are:

ADMITS PERIL OF ANARCHY IN MOVE

Mahatma Tells Randolph Churchill Bloodshed Is Not Too High Price

By RANDOLPH CHURCHILL
(Universal Service Special Cable)

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Unless Great Britain agrees to grant India complete self-government, which he does not expect, Mahatma M. K. Gandhi is ready to start India's civil disobedience campaign again, resulting, that bloodshed must be given as independence is to be gained.

Mahatma Gandhi made no subtle demand for India's independence at the conference yesterday, but he had hope that his simple words would be granted. I spoke with him in St. James Palace as he was he conducted a spinning wheel.

He received me kindly and sat at a small table eating fruit, milk and grapes as we talked. He wore a chaplet with a flower in his loin cloth.

KINDLY EYES

So much has been said of his ascetic appearance, he looks a prisoner to see what manner his kindly eyes he possesses and to observe the almost sensuous curve of his thick lower lip. Immediately poised on this Gandhi is not an ikon as he is painted.

For a half hour I spoke to this mysterious fanatic who, like me he could not accept from the conference merely dominion status. He asserted:

"We must have complete self-government without any safeguards as insisted so far by the British. Control of finance, arms and foreign affairs must be in Indian hands."

I asked him if he really expected Great Britain to agree to that and he responded:

"I am doubtful."

I asked:

"What will you do if Britain does not agree?"

He replied:

"We shall have to start the civil disobedience campaign again."

CIVIL WAR RISK

To my question as to whether there was any unity of purpose between the Hindus and the Mohammedans the Mahatma replied:

"Yes, there is unity of purpose but not unity of heart."

I asked the little brown man if he did not think there would be the risk of civil war and anarchy in India if Britain, as he wishes, should abandon control of India tomorrow. He answered:

"Yes, there would be that risk. But we must risk all for freedom."

I then asked Gandhi:

"Don't you feel qualms that Indian unity and freedom is only being achieved by years of [illegible]. Don't you feel apt the responsibility?"

He was [illegible]

ation has ever achieved a united freedom without bloodshed. Unless India accepts my doctrine of non-resistance, bloodshed is virtually inevitable."

Gandhi asked me to tell my father, Winston Churchill, former chancellor of the exchequer, and Lord Rothermere, the British publisher, that he wanted to see them in order to convince them of India's capacity for self-government. But I told him I did not think they could be easily converted.

Wreckage of Cramer's Plane Found at Sea

LONDON, Sept. 16. (AP)—The British trawler Lord Tient wirelessed the Associated Press today that it had picked up the wreckage of a seaplane in the approximate vicinity where Parker Cramer, American flier, was believed to have been lost on a flight from Detroit to Copenhagen.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. (AP)—K. D. Vosler, factory manager for the Edo Aircraft Corporation, today definitely identified wreckage found in the North Sea by the British trawler Lord Tient as that of the plane of Parker Cramer, former Clarion, Pa., flier lost on a flight from Detroit to Copenhagen.

BLAZED MAIL ROUTE

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 16. (AP)—Parker D. Shorty Cramer of Clarion, Pa., whose wrecked seaplane was believed found in the North Sea today, took off from Detroit July 26 to survey a proposed airmail route between Detroit and Copenhagen, Denmark.

With his Canadian wireless operator, Oliver Parquette, he disappeared from the world's notice August 9 when he took off from Lerwick in the Shetland Islands for Bergen and Copenhagen.

A veteran pilot and familiar with flying under Arctic conditions, he was selected by Transamerican Airways, Inc., of Cleveland to chart a proposed transAtlantic mail route over the Greenland ice cap and the North Atlantic Ocean.

Cramer reached Angmagssalik, Greenland, and his successful crossing of the ice cap, the most hazardous jump on his trip, was believed to have placed behind him perils of the flight.

HEIR ON TRIP, LEAVES BRIDE

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 16. (INS)—Slipping from this city in the early dawn, George Huntington Hartford, America's richest playboy, and his mother, Mrs. Henrietta Hartford, were believed en route to Virginia today.

They boarded a train at 4 a. m. and gave Hot Springs, Va., as their destination.

Mrs. Hartford and her son were discovered here late yesterday by International News Service. They were registered at a fashionable hotel although they have a palatial winter estate 14 miles from this city.

Mrs. Hartford and her son steadfastly refused to talk to interviewers.

They were not accompanied here by the youth's wife, the former Miss Mary Elizabeth Epping, of Welch, W. Va., who it was revealed yesterday, he secretly married last April 18 in Covington, Va.

BRITISH NAVAL STRIKERS WIN ON PAY CUT

Government to Alleviate Hardships Caused by Slash in Sailors' Wages

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS
(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Partial victory for the striking sailors in the British Navy, protesting against the proposed 25 per cent cut in enlisted men's pay, was assured today.

At a moment when uncompromising reports reached London that the discontent which has manifested itself in the Atlantic fleet at Invergordon had also spread to the British Mediterranean fleet, Sir Austen Chamberlain, first lord of admiralty, announced in the House of Commons that the government would make some alleviation of the hardships caused by the pay cuts.

The government has authorized the admiralty to alleviate hardship caused by pay cuts as soon as the facts have been ascertained, Chamberlain announced.

Sixteen vessels of the Atlantic fleet, including the battle cruiser Hood and Nelson, two of the largest in the world, swung idly at anchor as admiralty officials strove to end the serious disaffection arising from resentment over pay cuts.

Rear Admiral R. M. Colvin, chief of staff of the Atlantic fleet, appeared before the Admiralty Board and outlined the situation in detail, describing how seamen had refused to obey orders after staging meetings of protest against the pay cuts enforced as part of the government's economy program.

The cabinet of Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, which decreed the pay reductions met to consider the situation and summoned Chamberlain to furnish a full report.

According to the London Evening News, the disaffection started last week when the fleet was ordered to sail for maneuvers in the North sea. Ordered to weigh anchor, the seamen took their places astride the anchor cables and proposed three cheers to the King, to show that their protest was not directed against the crown.

LORETTA YOUNG WINS DIVORCE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 16.—(Universal)—Loretta Young, beautiful film actress, won a divorce from Grant Withers, actor, when she testified that during the year of their married life he bought her but one garment.

Loretta's big blue eyes flashed and she tossed her blonde hair as she said to Judge Willis:

"Now what do you think, Judge? All the time I was married he only bought me one piece of lingerie, a black lace affair, and he charged that to me."

The court asked:

"You don't mean to tell me he actually did that, and didn't support you, didn't buy you food?"

And so ended the romance of the film couple which began with an airplane elopement. Withers was not in court.

county. I have talked with the farmer on the hill and in the valley, the housewife in the kitchen, the man in the mill, the man in the street. I have touched all aspects of life and know the people of this great county. This has been a most enriching experience.

I am proud of the campaign that has been waged in my behalf. I believe that it is unique in the annals of political history of this county, because my entire organization has been volunteer. To my executive committee I wish to express publicly my indebtedness. To my general committee, the lawyers' committee, the press and the public who so steadfastly supported me not only during the campaign but at the polls, I express my sincere thanks.

The success of my campaign is due to the able direction of my chairman, Miss Hannah J. Patterson, and the members of her committee. The publicity and political strategy was directed by Mrs. Jennie B. Roessing and was unusual. The contacts in the field were made by Mrs. J. G. Chalfont and in that way it was easy for me to go into the townships and outlying regions of the county.

Mrs. Walter S. Church, as treasurer, was most efficient in directing the financial end of my campaign. Mr. Charles Arensburg, chairman of the lawyers' committee, and the members of the bar who served on that committee, have contributed definitely to the success of my campaign.

I am proud of the way in which my campaign was managed. My entire organization, with certain clerical exceptions, was volunteer. The women of the county were mobilized in behalf of my candidacy. Lawyers, press and public responded to the appeal of my campaign, namely, the fact that my candidacy was independent of faction and candidate and stood solely on its own feet.

"My record, training and experience were cited to the electorate of the county as the sole basis for their support.

BELIZE DEATHS ESTIMATED AT 2,000

Organized Relief Awaits Gunboat; Posters Convey King George's Sympathy

BELIZE, British Honduras, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Plans for rehabilitation of Belize remained at a standstill today while residents sought recovery from the shock of the hurricane that brought death and disaster to the city Thursday.

The death toll was officially estimated by navy doctors at 1,800 to 2,000. Nearly 1,000 bodies have been burned on five huge funeral pyres.

Whether the city will be rebuilt depends upon the success in cleaning up the wreckage of the frame buildings that housed Belize's 13,600 residents. No organized plan of relief was under way up to today, although arrival of the British gunboat Danae was expected to bring some sort of rehabilitation plan.

United States Navy doctors, rushed by plane and boat to the scene of the tragedy, continued today their efforts to avoid a wave of typhoid fever because of a lack of suitable drinking water.

Food was handed out by the Salvation Army from a central soup kitchen across the street from the City Hall and the emergency aid station set up in the First Presbyterian Church, where more than 1,000 injured persons have been treated since the storm.

Prison crews tossed body after body into the five pyres where the city's dead were burned without identification or ceremony.

Heroism of Priest Band Revealed by Survivor

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A story of a gallant band of priests groping in the tropical darkness to carry on rescue work was told here by Father James B. O'Neill, S. J., of St. Louis University, who arrived from Belize on the steamship Sinaloa. When news came that St. John's College had collapsed, the priests set out for the college, Father O'Neil said:

"We met Brother Jacobi, prefect of the college, and he was leading about 50 small boys into town. With Brother Jacobi, we lifted the boys to the top of an old burial vault, about 20 feet long and 10 feet in height. Then, when we suddenly noticed an eight-foot wall of water rushing in towards us, we threw ourselves on the ground and luckily escaped death.

"Then we started again. We made our way to a creek about 25 feet wide, but discovered the bridge had been washed away. Brother Jacobi leaped into the creek and swam to the opposite shore. There he rigged up telephone wires, which had been blown down during the hurricane. He strung them across the creek and the boys ferried themselves to the other side, hand-over-hand."

Brother Escapes Storm in Honduras

Mrs. S. Connari, of 163 Armadale street, Mt. Washington, has received a telegram from her brother, Henry Heitner, in Belize, British Honduras, location of the disastrous hurricane and tidal wave. The wire gave no details of the disaster other than to report the sender alive and safe.

W. Va. Claim Clerk Resigns Position

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 16.—The resignation of O. R. Graham, Charleston, for 11 years chief clerk in the claim division of the State Compensation Department, was announced by Commissioner Lee Ott. The resignation became effective September 1. W. R. Mendenhall is acting chief clerk of the department but a permanent successor to Graham has not been named, Ott said. Graham resigned to go into business.

Dictatorship Seen For Germany in '32

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—A prediction that a nationalist dictator will rule Germany by the first of next year was made today by Prof. William R. Shepherd, of Columbia University. He returned this morning from a tour of Europe.

In all likelihood, he said, the dictator will be Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, publisher and industrialist, with Adolf Hitler, Fascist leader, agitating the move.

TWELFTH WARD (FOURTEENTH DISTRICT) ELECTION BOARD SAFELY COUNTING ITS BALLOTS IN SHERIFF'S OFFICE

Wood, Once Playboy, Back Home as Troop Leader

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Gen. [illegible]orne Cutler Wood, son of the [illegible]te Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, world playboy who helped keep the brightest lights flickering in international centers of pleasure, today was proud to be back in his old home town.

But he looked eagerly forward, toward setting forth some time today on the return journey to his "land of sunshine and plenty" in which he fought his way up from poverty after his riches vanished, to prove that although down he was far from out.

Here as the representative of Gov. Seligman of New Mexico at the American Legion unemployment conference, Wood said he thought he had convinced his friends that even a top-good a fellow may get down, but never out. I am proud to be back in Washington today.

Wood, about eight years ago, gathered more than a million speculating in the stock market. The furore raised in Congress for a [illegible]estigation was answered by him with resignation of his commission.

Nine months after his Wall street coup, he landed at Tampa, flat, off a freighter, penniless, [illegible]friendless and virtually destitute, he disappeared. In the depths of a New Mexico copper mine he signed as a mucker, more than two years and his comeback began. Obtaining a commission in the New Mexico National Guard, Wood found his military training helping him. Slowly, soon rose in the rank of brigadier general and now is the state's adjutant general.

Girl's Suit Says Elkins Broke Payment Pact

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(Universal)—Suit for $1,000 a month allowance against former United States Senator Davis Elkins, of West Virginia, by Marie Allen Reynolds, of the Hotel St. Regis, has been revealed here.

Papers were filed in City Court, May 18, last, and stipulated that May 22 be set for trial of the action.

Miss Reynolds says Elkins signed an agreement to pay her $1,000 monthly for the rest of her life, and then, last April, the payments stopped.

She claims five months in arrears, and hopes to collect $5,000.

Marie told Justice Vincent S. Lippe she has collected $100,000 since they both signed on the dotted line back in 1923.

She wanted the court to know, she said emphatically, that she is on the verge of being a pauper, a public charge.

Elkins admits having signed the contract, and having sent her a monthly check for the last eight years, in spite of the fact that in 1927 he married Mary Reagen, an actress.

YACHTSMAN'S BODY FOUND; WIFE'S STORY STILL DOUBTED

VICTIM SHOWS WOUNDS OF STRUGGLE

Woman's Version of 'Pirate' Attack Fails to Mention Desperate Fight Indicated

HUNTINGTON STATION, N. Y., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The body of Benjamin Collings was washed ashore today, bound hand and foot as his wife had said he was thrown from their cruiser, but still District Attorney Alexander Blue refused to accept her story. He acknowledged, however, that Mrs. Collings might believe it to be true. He said:

"The story she tells in its entirety is not the true story, I believe, although she may believe it to be."

Blue called attention to the fact that Mrs. Collings' story offers no explanation for the fact, established according to Blue by injuries found on Collings' body, that there was a prolonged and violent struggle before he was finally subdued and trussed up.

BODY IDENTIFIED

After the body was brought here it was officially identified by the dead man's brother, Herbert Collings, who made the identification by means of a sapphire ring and teeth.

Herbert Collings said he had notified his sister-in-law of the discovery of the body, pending his identification of it, because he wished to spare her any unnecessary strain.

Blue took full charge of the case today when the body was found on the bathing beach of the Marshall Field estate, which is in Suffolk County, the county for which he is prosecutor. The main figure in the investigation previously had been District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards, of Nassau County. Edwards offered Blue full co-operation.

Mrs. Collings' story, told a dozen times with no important variations, is that two men boarded the Collings' cruiser Penguin, tied her husband and threw him into the sound, and then abducted her, leaving 5-year-old Barbara Collings alone on the Penguin, where she was found by another yachting party.

ROPE KNOTS CLUE

Blue said he was investigating a report that two escaped inmates of the King's Park Hospital for the Insane had been seen loitering about Northport, Long Island, near the scene of the tragedy.

The prosecutor said that investigation of the knots in the rope binding Collings' hands and feet by several experts showed they were double half hitches, a knot often used by sailors. They were so clumsily tied, however, he said, that they were evidently the work of an amateur at such matters.

RECALL SNYDER CASE

A crowd of villagers stood about the closed door of the town hall and the guarded entrance of the morgue, discussing the greatest murder mystery Long Island has known since Albert Snyder was killed by his wife and Judd Gray.

Collings evidently had been roughly handled before he was thrown in the water, for besides the deep hole in his head and the cut across his throat, his arms were severely bruised and there was a deep cut in one elbow.

When Blue arrived he spoke briefly with newspaper men before entering the town hall. He said:

"I had two theories on this case. One was that Collings had been kidnaped and the other that Mrs. Collings was implicated. Now, of course, the kidnaping theory is out."

After examination of the body at the morgue it was announced that all the pockets were turned inside out and there were no articles of identication on the body except a gold and sapphire ring. It was by this ring that the body was first identified.

Capt. Emil Morse, of the homicide squad, studied the knots with which Collings' hands and feet had been tied and described them as "revengeful knots."

LOVE TANGLE HINT PROBED IN KANE DEATH

Two Witnesses Sought As Keys to Drowning Of Professor's Wife

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service.

HAMPTON, Va., Sept. 16.—With rumors of a love tangle undenied, two witnesses were awaited by authorities today as possible keys in the baffling case against Dr. Elisha Kent Kane, 37, handsome University of Tennessee professor held on a charge of murder in connection with the mysterious death Friday of his wife, Jenny, 30. Authorities, who earlier conceded factors strongly in favor of the defendant, today said the complexion of the case had "changed somewhat," and announced succinctly they would "go clean to the bottom."

They refused to reveal the identity of the two witnesses whom they are now seeking. They admitted they did not know the whereabouts of these two witnesses.

Mrs. Kane died from drowning last Friday afternoon while she and her husband were swimming at Grand View beach, several miles south of Hampton on the Virginia peninsula.

Coroner Dr. G. K. Vanderslice allowed the body to be moved to the Newport News suburb home of the woman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Graham, but Sunday, several hours after funeral services for Mrs. Kane were held, Kane was arrested on a warrant charging murder.

Officials since then have sifted confusing charges by fishermen working near the scene of the drowning that Kane made no effort to revive his wife when he pulled her out of the water.

They conceded testimony of the fishermen before the coroner's inquest, begun Monday and still in progress, established nothing conclusive—but they continued to hold the professor. They refused to affirm or deny reports of "another woman" in the case, but indicated such reports were getting the strictest sort of attention.

Dr. Harry D. Howe, physician at Dixie Hospital, before going into the hearing room, advised Dr. Evan O'Neil Kane, father of the college professor and a prominent physician of Kane, Pa., who gained fame by operating on himself for appendicitis, that when he examined the body on Sunday he saw nothing to indicate that Mrs. Kane had been forced into the water or held there after falling.

BIRTH CONTROL SCORED BY BISHOP

British Churchman Also Attacks Divorce in Talk At P.E. General Conference

DENVER, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—An English bishop told the fiftieth general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church today that conditions similar to those resulting from the Russian Soviet anti-God campaign exist in the rest of the world through the prevailing attitude towards the fundamentals of Christianity.

The Rt. Rev. Michael Bolton Furse, bishop of St. Albans, England, who addressed the opening meeting, attacked the "sinister" position of the Christian world toward the increase in divorce and "the prevailing and increasing prevalence of birth control among married folk." He said:

"We may well look with horror on the anti-God campaign in Russia, but what is happening in Europe and America?"

Bishop Furse questioned whether Christian nations are upholding the sacred responsibility of Christian parenthood, or "are we compromising with a comfort-loving world in its efforts to avoid this God-given responsibility?"

The bishop said that, outside of Russia, in spite "of determined attacks often made by men and women of ability on Christian morals, yet I believe the vast majority of people are still possessed of a genuine desire to see their children brought up Christian in character." He added:

"Wherever you see a handful of men and women who have really given themselves to Christ, seeking in the power of the Holy Spirit to witness to the faith that is in them, there you see that the Christian religion is still, as it always will be, the strongest and most vital power for all that is best and finest in human life."

AIMEE'S MATE SUED FOR BALM BY GIRL

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 16.—The newest wrinkle on the troubled surface of Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton's latest romance may be smoothed out without resort to the courts.

This possibility arose today with the announcement through her attorney, by Myrtle H. J. St. Pierre, that she would consider an out-of-court settlement of her $200,000 breach of promise suit against David L. Hutton, newlywed husband of the famed woman evangelist.

Almost simultaneous with filing of this suit, another court action, indirectly involving Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy, Aimee's mother, was started in Las Vegas, Nev. Guy Edward Hudson, whose marriage to Mrs. Kennedy ended in annulment, filed suit in the Nevada city, asking a divorce from his legal wife, Mrs. L. Margaret Newton-Hudson.

ON REVIVAL TOUR

Meanwhile, Aimee and her baritone-voiced husband were out of the city today, embarked on a revival tour that will take them to Portland, Ore. In the wake of their northward journey the happy couple left vigorous denials of Miss St. Pierre's allegations and a warning to the 29-year-old nurse that they would cling together in the expected battle over her suit. Aimee said:

"As far as I am concerned, I believe in Dave all the way and am standing right by him."

Hutton, a singer in Aimee's Angelus Temple choir, characterized Miss St. Pierre's charges as "unfounded" and accused the nurse of filing the suit merely to gain "money or notoriety."

In her complaint Miss St. Pierre alleges she met the choral baritone last January and that he proposed marriage to her after an eight-day courtship.

Aimee exclaimed:

"What's another suit in the McPherson family? There isn't anything so helpless as a man when he is accused of such things by a woman. It has been quite the rage to file suits of this kind. I believe everyone will see and realize how absurd these charges are."

MA'S MATE SUES

Another and previous domestic difficulty in Aimee's family circle bobbed up on the same day her bridegroom was sued. "What-a-Man" Hudson, erstwhile husband of Mrs. Kennedy, yesterday filed suit for a Nevada divorce from Mrs. Newton-Hudson.

It was Mrs. Newton-Hudson's sudden appearance as Hudson's legal wife that caused his romance with "Ma" to end in an annulment. In his divorce suit, filed at Las Vegas, Hudson alleged cruel treatment, causing loss of health.

Mrs. Kennedy is in Las Vegas, apprised of Miss St. Pierre's suit, said:

"Have they started excavating at Angelus Temple again? Guy and I can breathe freely. There are no skeletons rattling in our closet. They've all been thrown on the screen."

SIREN'S BALM TRIAL SET

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—The reported and denied $600,000 alienation of affections and libel suits against Marlene Dietrich, the film star, became an actuality today when notices of trial were put down for October 5 in the Supreme Court.

Miss Dietrich, who came from Germany to land Hollywood at her feet, is being sued by Mrs. Ziga von Sternberg, wife of Joseph von Sternberg, film director. Mrs. von Sternberg asked $500,000 for the alleged theft of her husband's love by the actress and $100,000 for libel.

FREED PATIENTS ROUNDED UP

CLEVELAND, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—With eight new cases of typhoid fever found among the 2,350 inmates of the State Hospital, Cleveland health authorities today began a roundup of all patients discharged from the institution since the start of the epidemic August 15.

Dr. Harold J. Knapp, City Health Commissioner, said he considered this the most important step in preventing a general epidemic throughout the city.

Already guards have been placed about the institution and city bathing beaches closed. Tests made of Lake Erie water, from which Cleveland draws its water supply, have shown no evidence of contamination, however.

Six deaths have occurred among inmates. More than 130 have been stricken.

Slash in Holland Deficit Proposed

THE HAGUE, Sept. 16.—Parliament has received a budget statement under which Holland's estimated $30,000,000 deficit would be reduced to a little more than $8,000,000. Proposed reforms include postponement of battleship construction, suspension of further draining of the Zeider Zee and a reduction of salaries of state officials of 5 per cent for three years.

A NEW AND A BROKEN HANDLE . . . THE TINY PIN'S THE POINT

EDITOR KILLED IN PLUNGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Parker Lloyd Smith, managing editor of Fortune, the dollar de luxe magazine, was killed today when he jumped or fell from a window of his twenty-third story apartment to a roof below. A note to his mother was found in his apartment.

His body, nude, was found on the eighth floor extension of the Hotel Croydon, adjoining. Police listed the case as a suicide and attributed it to overwork and the heat.

Lloyd Smith, 30, listed in the Social Register and a graduate of Princeton University in 1924, was unmarried.

Mackay and Singer-Bride To Protest Port Quiz

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—Clarence H. Mackay, telegraph company head, said today he would send a protest to Washington authorities because of the treatment he received here last night by customs officials.

Mackay and his bride, the former Anna Case, opera singer, were held for a considerable time when their baggage was inspected. Mackay was questioned for more than half an hour by officials. They were the last passengers permitted to leave the liner Olympic. In all, seven agents questioned Mackay, he said.

Nothing was found wrong with the Mackays' baggage. The financier paid $409 in duties and Mrs. Mackay paid $2,185.

High Court Refuses to Balk Poor Board Probe

Judge Thomas J. Baldrige, of Superior Court, has refused to grant the writ of supersedeas asked by counsel for the Allegheny County Board of Poor Directors, which would have blocked the Board of Visitors appointed by Judge James H. Gray, of Quarter Sessions Court, in investigating the board.

No opinion was handed down by Judge Baldrige, as none is necessary in supersedeas cases. The refusal was recorded in the Prothonotary's office.

The Board of Visitors appointed by Judge Gray, consisting of Attorneys E. H. Wicks, G. M. McDonald and Paul E. Hutchinson, upon learning of the decision, immediately went into session at Mr. Wicks' office in the Grant Building. They announced the probe will be pushed energetically.

The plea for the supersedeas was made at Hollidaysburg by attorneys representing Maj. J. Clyde Miller, Dr. W. L. Henderson and H. H. Dixon, present members of the Poor Board.

Voting Machine Arrests Sought

PARK DIRECTS PROBE

District Attorney Andrew T. Park remained at the Court House all night [illegible] The investigation was begun [illegible] putting [illegible] tion [illegible] Attorney Park decided [illegible] to [illegible] Attorney [illegible] Hirsh [illegible] Funk [illegible] and accused of [illegible] will be made.

Nineteen machines with new handles but otherwise unharmed were being returned today to the new County Building. The original handles had been filed and broke off on the first attempt to use the machines. Nine unused machines were returned to headquarters.

Funk, the repairman, was fired on orders of Attorney Hirsh, who said the man was caught wrecking the machines. Hirsh said he was so angry that the repairman had not discharged him and did not prosecute.

Hirsh's investigation also netted [illegible] alleged vandals who are charged with [illegible] telephone wires leading into the storage room of the new County Building where machine [illegible] received complaints of broken down machines.

The [illegible] represents the Pooley Engineering Company, makers of the machines. During the voting he was engaged in supervising the storage plan.

Following Hirsh's charges of tampering, District Attorney Park sent an assistant to discuss the [illegible] with the object of finding the basis for prosecutions.

BLAME WISH FOR BALLOTS

Charges also were made that [illegible] of the members of the election boards "jammed" the machines in the hope of getting ballots.

The discovery that a workman had been "adjusting" the machines came after complaints were received that devices fixed were still unworkable, according to Hirsh. He added that he sent other men to investigate and checked up on the alleged repairmen.

PLANS PROSECUTION

Hirsh said:

"A man named L. Funk was fired when one of our workmen, after reports, caught him tampering with the machines instead of repairing them. I was too busy to prosecute, being unable to leave the vicinity of the Courthouse and the machines there. I will be able to locate him and prosecute at the earliest convenience.

"In the Fourth Ward, the handles of 19 machines were broken, but the electrically operated machines worked reasonably well.

"The pins on the handles of these machines, of chrome steel, were filed off, and hacksaws used. We have some of the fillings and the handles, showing where the files failed to penetrate the solid part of the handles. The pin, smaller, was easier to work.

"It took the hardest kind of a file to cut off these pins—certain evidence that a plot had been hatched. We first heard of it when a newspaperman noticed the filed pin when he went to vote in his district of the Fourth Ward."

PHONE WIRES CUT

Asked why he didn't have Funk arrested immediately, or police informed of the actions of the repairman, Hirsh answered:

"I had been too busy here with these machines. We had a terrible day. The phone wires were cut here in the office, and we couldn't even get requests for repairs.

"I don't consider, however, that the machines failed. They will work if the election boards know that they cannot get paper ballots. Inexperience was a big factor."

OFFICER FREED IN VOTE ROW

William R. Kessler, the suspended city patrolman and deputy constable of the Sixth Ward, mobbed and arrested by Penn avenue police during an election row, was freed by Judges Elder W. Marshall and Frank P. Patterson early today.

Kessler's release came after Congressman P. J. Sullivan scored police tactics in an address before the court. Three others arrested with Kessler also were freed.

It was Kessler's fourth appearance in court this week. He testified he obeyed the instructions of the Judge of Election of the Sixth District in checking a line of late voters. As he attempted, he said, to keep order, he was attacked by a squad of police and arrested.

Kessler was suspended from duty last week by Capt. John Schmitt, who was ordered because the officer had assisted Luke J. Hanna, Sixth Ward constable and Armstrong adherent, in making an arrest for an attack on Armstrong's Oakland headquarters. He was later appointed deputy constable of the Sixth Ward by Judge James H. Gray.

WESTMORELAND REGULARS WIN

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 16.—Climaxing one of the most hectic political battles in recent years in Westmoreland County, incomplete unofficial returns today indicated that the Regular Republican organization candidates, under the direction of Harry F. Bovard, all were successful with the possible exception of William P. Nowe, candidate for Sheriff. The present returns indicate that William H. Humes, Deputy Sheriff, will be the Republican nominee.

Unofficial Republican returns also show that Elliott L. Hibbs and James F. Torrance, incumbent County Commissioners, have been renominated for the third time in the face of a stiff fight waged by John Itzel, chief county detective.

The Democratic minority place now held and again sought by John P. Kilgore, still was in doubt as Democratic returns were exceedingly slow in being computed.

Judge Charles E. Whitten and Daniel J. Snyder both have been renominated, late returns indicate, while the same seems to be true of W. C. Henderson (Rep.), Register of Wills; Garfield A. McDowell, County Controller, and Mrs. Emma E. Mowry, Recorder of Deeds.

Dr. H. A. McMurray has landed the Republican nomination for Coroner.

THEATER BOMB IMPERILS BABY

CHICAGO, Sept. 16 (Universal).—The life of a 2-year-old child was imperiled and a police sergeant was injured yesterday in the bombing of the new Regent Theater, the sixth act of terrorism in the labor war between the Independent theater owners and the Motion Picture Operators' Union.

It was the third bombing in 24 hours. The treater was damaged $4,000.

Police Chief John H. Alcock ordered the suspension of Policemen Aloysius McCarthy and William Steffen, who had been assigned to guard this theater. The bomb apparently was tossed from the roof of an adjoining three-story building or from an upper floor porch. By this method the bomber escaped the observation of the two policemen.

Sergeant George Hillman was severely cut by flying glass. In the nearby home of Mrs. Kathleen Davis her 2-year-old daughter narrowly escaped injury when windows were shattered and plaster was dislodged.

NAVY TO TAKE NEW DIRIGIBLE

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce today renewed efforts to have the giant dirigible Akron make its first flight to Pittsburgh. The airship will be turned over to United States Navy representatives tomorrow by the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation. Its maiden flight may take place Monday.

An invitation for the Akron to include Pittsburgh in its first flight was favorably received by Admiral W. R. Sexton, chief of naval air operations, several weeks ago. Commander C. E. Rosendahl of the dirigible said the ship's itinerary would depend largely on weather conditions.

The Pittsburgh-built "slow-motion" locomotive, which will be used to transport the new Navy dirigible in and out of its hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., adds to the local interest felt in the Akron. Duraluminum used in the framework of the huge airship was rolled in Pittsburgh and New Kensington. Much of the framework was rolled in the Arnold sheet mill of the Aluminum Company of America.

Historic Home Burns At Chadds' Ford

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 16 (AP).—A smoldering mass of ruins was all that remained today of the old colonial farm house used by George Washington and his staff as their headquarters during the battle of Brandywine in 1777. The structure, known throughout the country as "Washington's headquarters," caught fire and burned to the ground at Chadds Ford, near here, early today.

Mt. Etna Active, Residents Alarmed

CATANIA, Sicily, Sept. 16 (AP).—Mt. Etna has sprung into action and residents of the vicinity are alarmed at the column of smoke which pours from the mountain. The director of the Etna Observatory said an eruptive conduit formed 15 years ago has come to life again and if the level of the lava rises only slightly there will be an eruption. The present activity has been developing for three months, he said.

Sharp Earthquake Rocks Tokio District

TOKIO, Sept. 16 (AP).—A sharp earthquake shook Tokio and vicinity at 9:45 o'clock tonight (8:45 a. m. Pittsburgh time) today.

As far as could be learned, there was no damage.

Six Burn to Death When Plane Falls

BUCHAREST, Sept. 16.—(INS)—Six persons were burned to death today when a trimotored plane en route from Bucharest to Paris crashed and burst into flames near Balatsiza, Rumania.

Boroughs and Townships Primary Returns

WEST VIEW

Unofficial returns from West View indicated the independent faction was successful in the councilmanic fight with Walter J. Baker and Fred McCune selected for two of the vacancies. C. H. Dunn was re-elected to the third post.

In the school board fight Dr. A. E. Torrence won by a big majority but the outcome of the contests for other positions on the board were problematical.

STOWE TOWNSHIP

Seven districts out of nine in Stowe Township in the fight for Justice of the Peace gave Tony Savats, 1,153, Alex Boehm, 940; Berl Elliot, 762; Henry Williams, 882, and William Blumling, 385.

Similar returns in the Constable contest in Stowe Township gave William Duffy, 1,184; George Burkhart, 982; Thomas Saunders, 936; Frank Pastin, 780; Joseph Popgen, 381, and Elmer Streets, 297.

DRAVOSBURG

Semi-official returns from Dravosburg indicated the two Justices of the Peace, James Allen and H. C. Fenton, were re-elected. In the fight for Auditor, Ned Chesterfield had a slight lead over Ben Lindquist, Jr.

In the contest for School Director, with two to elect, W. L. McCaw and Harry C. Richards were leading, while Fred E. Corwin and R. B. McQuade were leading in the Constable contest.

With three Councilmen to be named from a list of five candidates, James Barrickman, Edward S. Bruce and M. R. Virden were leading, Adam Hickman and H. G. Whitaker.

OAKMONT

W. H. Jennings with 601 votes, W. C. Bermont, 553, and James F. Stewart, 491, were the winners in the councilmanic fight in Oakmont in a close contest in which 10 candidates took part. W. J. Ball was nominated Justice of the peace by a large majority, and George W. Walter, auditor. John Couch was nominated high constable with a record vote of 1,093.

In the school director election Carl Frey, with 850, and Alex Palme, with 826 votes were successful.

SPRINGDALE

Councilman and the constable seeking re-election in Springdale were successful in their fights for the nominations, as were Frank McGrath, Stanley Gibbs and Don Coss, who won in the council election, and Clarence Shearer in the constable contest. Earl Shoop was the successful candidate for the nomination of justice of the peace in a contest in which seven others took part.

DORMONT

With two districts missing in the Councilmanic race in Dormont, where seven candidates strove for places, it was indicated that Jack Lang, Charles Phillips and Lee Llewellyn had captured leads great enough to insure them the positions. Returns were coming in too slowly in the contests for school director and justice of the peace to determine the leaders, it was said.

ETNA

Etna voters for the first time in the borough's history nominated a woman for public office when Dr. Bertha L. Berger with an overwhelming majority was chosen a member of the school board. Other contests were close and early today it was impossible to determine the leaders, it was said.

BRADDOCK

Incomplete returns indicate a victory for the organization forces in Braddock, led by Michael J. Verosky and Thomas Howard. Councilmen supported by Verosky and Howard were elected as follows: First Ward, M. J. Verosky and John Gallagher; Second Ward, George House; Third Ward, William Tracy; Fourth Ward, Jacob Mendelblatt and Lawrence Webber; Justices of the Peace, Albert Parlak and George House; Constables, First Ward, Mike Mihalik; Second Ward, Joseph Slone; Third Ward, Emmet Keough.

INGRAM

In hotly contested voting for borough nominations in Ingram the Progress and Economy ticket was successful in every fight but that for position on the School Board. Fred D. Kadle was nominated for Auditor, Paul S. McBride, Constable, W. H. Siefried, L. C. Botkins and W. S. Wise, Councilmen, and C. A. Richards and F. J. Nichols, School Directors.

SHARPSBURG

Edward Michalowski, President of the Sharpsburg Council, was nominated for re-election in Sharpsburg, where the only contest was for Council seats. It was thought likely the other two nominees would be Leo Horstman and Joseph Carasi. Richard Morrissy, who was seeking re-election, fell hopelessly behind, it appeared.

SWISSVALE

Incomplete returns from Swissvale election districts indicated that Dr. George Seitz and W. J. Binsbu were certain of councilmanic nominations, while the third councilmanic position rested between James Fagan and Jack Sokes, who is seeking re-election. The constable race was apparently won by Lieut. "Buff" Farina of the Swissvale police force. Arthur Davis and Dr. L. N. Smith were conceded the nominations for school director and George Hammond for auditor.

CARNEGIE

Justice of the Peace A. W. McMillen, of Carnegie, emerged victorious in the bitter fight in which he was nominated to succeed himself. McMillen had 1,226 votes with returns reported from five of the six districts in the borough. Jabez Cooper had 1,021 and Edward Hepplewhite trailed with 208 votes.

In the Council fight, Elmer Magee had 1,018, Samuel Wilkinson, 872, and H. F. Botsford, 808. Harry Keisling was nominated for Constable of the First Ward, and Fred Mathias in the Second Ward.

AVALON

Avalon school board nominees are Chester Jacobs and J. C. Philibar, and the council fight was won by Robert Biedell, Howard White, Leroy Zehner and David Hall.

BRENTWOOD

One of the hottest contests in the county was in Brentwood, where Simon Suttner defeated John Black for the nomination of Justice of the Peace by two votes. Suttner got 685 and Black 683 votes. John Milligan with 783 votes won the auditorship nomination, while E. W. Gracey was unopposed for Constable, as was George M. Switzer for High Constable.

Ten candidates sought places in the borough Council, but the three to win the nomination included two incumbents, J. C. Klein, 663, and Jacob Grab, 621. The third nominee was John W. Sankey with 595.

School Director, six-year term, nominees were John Seiferth, incumbent, with 640 votes, and John Gray, 665 votes. School Directors, four-year term, Fred Ward, 939, and Mrs. Janet Cramer, incumbent, 913.

EAST PITTSBURGH

Claire Flasher, Emil Strippmater and John Ferrence, all seeking re-election as members of the East Pittsburgh Council, were nominated for the position, as was Gus Katsiles, who defeated Nathan Beck, a fourth member, who sought re-election.

Justice of the Peace M. T. Gorham, seeking re-election, was nominated by an overwhelming majority, as was Constable William Boyle, who is also seeking re-election. R. Bruce Yeaney and E. A. Chambers, members of the school board, were also renominated.

TURTLE CREEK

R. J. Hawley, W. A. Cunningham and R. W. Brown won the councilmanic nominations in the election contest in Turtle Creek. The fight for the constable nominations was won by Michael Nair in the First Ward and by Russell Brown in the Third Ward.

CHESWICK

Election returns in Cheswick today indicated that Frank McCullough, R. A. Murray and Maj. Acker had been nominated for council. J. G. Cummings was nominated for justice of the peace and for the school board, while John Biser was named for constable. Robert Stewart was named for the second justice of the peace position and Robert Smith was also chosen for the school.

HAYSVILLE

F. J. Kane, J. E. Wall, S. M. Caughey and T. B. Keith were nominated for Council in Haysville, while E. R. Gardner won the Constable nomination; F. F. Merriman, School Director; J. R. Kerr, Judge of Elections; Margaret B. Hay, Inspector of Elections, and Edna Eppley, Auditor.

WILMERDING

John Volpe, Republican leader in the Westinghouse Valley, said that his entire ticket in Wilmerding was nominated after a stiff fight. Heavy majorities were reported for Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, Senator James J. Coyne and District Attorney Andrew Park. Three councilmen, three school directors and a constable who were nominated composed the fight.

CRAFTON

The fight in Crafton centered around the nominations for council which were won by Howell Jeffrey and Kenneth Dunn, of the First Ward, and William T. Speer, of the Second Ward.

MT. LEBANON TOWNSHIP

The ticket sponsored in Mt. Lebanon Township by L. C. Clark, chairman of the board of commissioners, seeking re-election, won out in the primary yesterday, according to figures today, which showed that aside from Clark, the other nominees for the board were Andrew B. Robb, Jr., and Ronald Thompson. Robert Zina and former Police Chief Charles Baldwin won the nominations for constables.

GREENTREE

Efforts of John Gray, O. W. Heselbarth and J. Scott Moore to be nominated for their old positions in Greentree Council were successful at yesterday's election, returns today indicated. The fight was closely contested by two other candidates.

THORNBURG

Thornburg's campaign, according to returns today, was marked by a unique feature, the nomination of a mother as a School Director and her son as an Auditor. They are Mrs. Mary E. Crist and her son, Francis E. Crist, 27. Other nominations were High Constable, John B. Davis; Constable, W. B. Horner; School Director, Brownlee H. Gibson, and Council, H. N. Muller, J. E. Wright and W. D. Wiggins.

NORTH BRADDOCK

With the exception of the constable contest in the Second Ward, the "Home Rule" ticket of North Braddock was nominated. Those named for council were P. J. McLeigh, Robert Sweinberg, Joseph Lawler and Howard Emiegh. Charles M. Richards defeated William Porter, who was seeking re-election as Justice of the Peace.

BOARD STARTS COUNT FRIDAY

Judges Elder W. Marshall and George V. Moore, assigned by Presiding Judge James R. Macfarlane to supervise the count of primary ballots by the returning board, today began preparations for the count scheduled to begin Friday noon.

Because two of the present County Commissioners were candidates for renomination, the returning board tabulations will be entirely in charge of the court.

DREW WINNER IN SUPREME COURT RACE

Pittsburgh Jurist Sweeps Allegheny, Philadelphia Counties for Huge Lead

International News Service

HARRISBURG, Sept. 16 Nomination of Judge James B. Drew, of Allegheny County, to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court over Graham C. Woodward, Philadelphia independent, who opposed him in yesterday's heated off year primary, today was assured as returns came in from all sections of the state.

The Allegheny jurist, backed by all the forces of the old line Republican organizations in both Allegheny and Philadelphia counties, and drawing support from regular Republican factions in most counties, despite embittered local contest which split county groups on factional lines was expected to roll up a majority in the late tabulations which will put him far ahead of his independent opponent.

WINS PHILADELPHIA

In Philadelphia, Judge Drew carried the city by a sizeable margin, early returns showed and his plurality in that county was so assured that backers of Woodward evinced little uncertainty over the result.

Allegheny County also plumped its votes for Judge Drew. The early returns showed his lead in the Western Pennsylvania population center was so great his romination was considered certain, backed by the results of the early counting from other counties.

TRAILS IN CUMBERLAND

An interesting sidelight on the contest for the Supreme Court nomination, the only state-wide contest on the ballot in the primary, came from Cumberland County where Woodward had a lead in early returns.

The vacancy on the Supreme bench to which Judge Drew was named by Gov. Pinchot and for which he sought the full 21-year term, was caused by death of Justice Sylvester B. Sadler, of Cumberland County.

Dauphin County, center of a bitter struggle between old line Republicans and lieutenants of the Governor gave Judge Drew a majority and from the hard coal regions came early returns indicating the Allegheny jurist had carried that section with comparative ease.

In the Democratic balloting, where Judge Drew was opposed by Charles F. Uhl, regular Democrat, of Somerset County, Uhl had a lead, early returns from over the state indicated.

MEXICANS MOB U. S. AUTOS

EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 16.—(AP)—On the eve of the opening of Independence Day festivities in Mexico, several automobiles bearing American citizens back to El Paso were attacked by celebrators south of the international bridge here last night.

The attack occurred just before the motorists, waiting in line to return to the United States, rolled into American territory from Juarez. A long line of marchers filled Juarez avenue, the main street to the international bridge.

One woman, Mrs. Benton R. Spencer, of Fort Bliss, Tex., was cut by flying glass when the windows from the left side of her car were broken with an iron bar.

Disregarding efforts of Mexican immigrations officers, marchers continued across the Mexican side of the bridge and turned back to Juarez only when they reached the international border. Officials in Juarez said they felt the demstration was not anti-American, but the work of a few disgruntled.

Velvet Dresses

Are "Very Reasonable" This Fall

$25

Last year women would have paid considerably more for dresses of this quality.

Those in regular sizes range all the way from daytime dresses that are "all line," having no trimming except rhinestone buttons, to dinner types with tops and cap sleeves of embroidered georgette or lace.

Short women's models—in sizes 33½ to 43½—are cut on simple lines, which are best suited to velvet and most becoming to short figures.

All models come in black, brown and dark blue, and many of those in regular sizes also can be had in wine and green shades.

Schiaparelli's New Corduroy Coat

Here it is! . . . the famous coat which all Paris acclaimed when it appeared in Schiaparelli's opening a few weeks ago, and which has given a thrill to blase American fashionists.

The first reproductions were about twice this price . . . the Misses' Shop has had it copied in black, dark blue and brown, silk lined and interlined, for

LISTS ROW ENDS IN STAMPEDE TO POLLS

7,481 Registrants Put Back By Court Order at 11th Hour After Long Wrangle

An eleventh hour rush to the polls last night by throngs of voters reinstated from the registration lists by the Board of Registration Commissions and finally reinstated at a late hour by President Judge James R. Macfarlane in Common Pleas Court climaxed a riveting phase of a campaign injected into

COURT IN TURMOIL

Common Pleas Court was a scene of turmoil throughout the day as excited voters clamored for a hearing and a horde of attorneys rapidly presented petition after petition before Macfarlane. The turbulence came to a sudden end shortly after 5 o'clock when testimony was produced from the County Treasurer's office that the County Tax Board had certified lists of assessments including the disfranchised registrants. This was the pivotal point in the hearings and the judges had solved in vain the task of [illegible] establish [illegible]

EXCEED AUTHORITY

The police exceeded the authority conferred by the court order giving notice that all persons stricken from the lists were to be allowed to vote and failing to mention the conditions in the order. They completed their round by 7 o'clock, one hour before the polls closed.

Warrants were served on the four members of the Registration Board, John K. Morrow, chairman; E. Lowry Humes, Mrs. Sarah Braun and Thomas Joyce, on an information charging conspiracy jointly with Edward J. Sullivan, candidate for constable in the Twenty-fifth Ward. The information was made by Mrs. Mary F. Green before Alderman A. W. Headley of the Twenty-fifth Ward. The board members were released on their own recognizance by order of District Attorney Andrew T. Park.

DORMONT JAILS 8 AT POLLS

Eight men living in Pittsburgh were placed under arrest by Dormont police when they attempted to vote in the Third District, Pioneer avenue, according to Burgess Charles Chamberlin.

The men, arrested by Chief of Police Ralph Miller and Capt. Robert Hasley and charged with being suspicious persons, will be turned over to the District Attorney, Burgess Chamberlin said.

Those arrested are N. Scarlata, Cape May avenue; Gus Gianni, Brookline boulevard; Joseph Cots, Congress street; Frank Bascarosa, Brookline boulevard; Ben Fromme, Wylie avenue; Mattie Scarlata, Chateau street, and Roxie Spade, Brookline boulevard.

Burgess Chamberlin said:

"Fraudulent voting in the borough of Dormont will positively not be tolerated. I am for clean politics at all times."

WALSH DEFEATS SCHNEIDER

Police Supt. P. P. Walsh "steam-rollered" his son, Paul J. Walsh, into the office of Constable of the First Ward in yesterday's primaries with a plurality of 811 votes.

Young Walsh's opponent, Jack Schneider, backed by Senator James J. Coyne, lost every district, although this was one of the most bitterly fought ward contests in the city.

The vote was:

District	Walsh	Schneider

Vote Machines in 4 Wards

Voting machines were used yesterday for the first time in Pittsburgh, four wards being equipped mechanically with 80 machines. These wards were the First, Second, Third and Fourth.

It was in the Fourth Ward that machines were said to have been wrecked deliberately.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Society Happenings

WOMEN TO VISIT BATTLEFIELD

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

With so many folks back in town, organizations of society women will start the fall and winter work soon. Among these is the Woman's Industrial Exchange board, which directs the work of the Woman's Exchange, Penn avenue.

The board met this morning at 10:30 o'clock in the Exchange. Mrs. William Christopher Robinson is president. Mrs. John Penny, Mrs. Richard Beatty Mellon and Mrs. George McKee, vice presidents; Mrs. Walter S. Heron, recording secretary, assisted by Mrs. Samuel Alfred McClung; Mrs. William C. Moreland, treasurer, assisted by Mrs. George D. Macbeth, and Mrs. Albert Wells, corresponding secretary, assisted by Mrs. Thomas C. Watts.

The Rolling Rock Hunt has already arranged for October hunting. On Saturdays and Wednesdays throughout the month, at 2:30 o'clock, the hounds will meet, with the exception of the week of October 12, when there'll be a hunt on Monday, Columbus Day, at 10 o'clock in the morning.

* * *

Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby and Mrs. Gordon C. King Jr. have returned from quite an extensive European tour. They sailed in July for Italy, and later Mrs. Jacoby went to Rome and then joined Mrs. King in Milan. From there they went into Switzerland, then Paris, from where they sailed again for home. Both attended the Pittsburgh Hunt horse show on Saturday.

* * *

Many social leaders have given trophies for the winners in the Westmoreland Hunt Horse Show, to be held on the polo field, Greensburg, Friday and Saturday.

Horse Show

Miss Margaret Coulter has provided the trophy for the model saddle horses, and Richard Beatty Mellon for horses suitable to become hunters.

The Charles L. Fleecuses have given the model lightweight hunter prize, and the A. Rex Flinns the trophy for the winner in the middleweight hunters' class, and the John G. Hoffstotts for the heavyweights.

Other trophy donors are: Mrs. Roy A. Hunt, George Paull, Joseph A. Kelly, W. W. Wattles, J. E. Caldwell, Erskine Ramsey, Frank B. Miller, John Grabowsky, J. U. Kuhns, Elmer L. Turner, Henry W. Coulter, Herbert A. May and Robert S. Waters.

Trophy donors also include Dr. and Mrs. Edward J. McCague, Joseph D. Wentling, William S. Moorhead, Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, Dr. Ralph Lynch, L. Walter Dowling, H. F. Bevard, the John W. Lawrences, Richard King Mellon, William A. Coulter, Mrs. Niles Trammell and Miss Charles McK. Lynch.

The farmers over whose fields the Westmoreland Hunt rides have furnished the trophy for the Farmers' Cup event, and Mrs. Murray A. Cobb will present the Huff Memorial Cup for the open hunters' class.

Federation Will Make Tour of Gettysburg

Friday of convention week (October 12 to 16) will be "play day" for the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women. Motor cars will leave the Woman's Club of York for a trip to Gettysburg. Once there, the Mothers' Club, under the direction of its president, Mrs. Eddie Plank, will take charge of the party and escort the members over the entire battlefield, taking the route of the three days' battle. A guide will give explanatory talks concerning the fighting.

From the field the visitors will be taken to the college grounds, where a stop will be made at the beautiful Eddie Plank Memorial Gymnasium. Time will be given any members of the party wishing to visit with friends and students, and the women will move on for luncheon at the Presbyterian Church. This closes the week's convention, the thirty-sixth annual meet of the federation.

An "acquaintanceship" garden party for the city council of the Pittsburgh Parent-Teacher Association will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. C. A. Rehtmeyer, Beacon street, Friday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. The affair, which will be purely social, is planned to afford the various workers in the organization an opportunity to get acquainted and will precede the regular opening of the fall program.

Garden Party

Guests will include the principals of the various schools where there is a parent-teacher unit, executives of the local units, Dr. B. G. Graham, superintendent of schools, and his staff.

Mrs. Walter R. Toerge, Mrs. J. V. Clippenger, Mrs. C. S. Cuden and Mrs. A. C. Moffet, members of the hospitality and registration committees, will serve as aides. On the committee of arrangements are Mrs. F. R. Cunliffe, Mrs. B. F. Handloser, Mrs. S. K. Cunningham, Mrs. H. C. Courtwright and Miss M. E. Wolfe.

* * *

The Pittsburgh Alumnae Association of Phi Mu Fraternity will hold its fall meeting tomorrow evening at the Women's City Club. The regular business meeting will be followed by a bridge party and is open to all Phi Mu's in the vicinity.

* * *

A luncheon and program will be given Thursday, September 24, by the Woman's Missionary Society of Mt. Pisgah Presbyterian Church, Greentree. The program will consist of a talk on child welfare by Miss Lillian Smith and solos by Mrs. J. Andrew Gettig, of Greentree, formerly of Braddock.

* * *

The fall rally of the woman's Union of the Pittsburgh Baptist Association will be held in the Rochester Baptist Church tomorrow. The president, Mrs. James M. Rath, of McKeesport, will preside at both morning and afternoon sessions.

Holding Rally

At 2 o'clock Mrs. Harry G. Samson, of the Council of Churches, will address the women on international peace.

* * *

Social affairs planned for the women visitors to the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Homeopathic Medical Society include a luncheon and card party at the Pittsburgh Field Club today. A luncheon was given for them at the William Penn Hotel yesterday. Later in the afternoon they were taken on a sight-seeing tour of the city and were entertained at tea in Mrs. J. D. Kistler's home, Fifth avenue.

STARK SIMPLICITY MARKS THE SMART VELVET FROCK

Sketched in Paris

(Copyright, 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Those who are adept at gilding the lily and painting the rose are often dismayed to find that their best efforts pale into shoddy insignificance when placed beside stark simplicity. Thus it is that very often the wearer of the velvet frock elaborately cut and trimmed is terribly provoked to discover that the simple velvet frock, plainly but distinctively cut, and devoid of any trimming, invariably carries off sartorial honors. If you would have a velvet frock that will do you faithful service through the season, choose a model of fine velvet, simple in cut, gracious in line and entirely unrelieved. The woman with good coloring and a fine, white clear skin will find that such a frock will further enhance these good points and mark her as a woman of clothes-sense, refinement and distinction. And that is what most of us would like our clothes to do, isn't it? This year, there are several such velvet frocks available, gowns that are suggestive of a period frock because they are picturesque, but cleverly avoid definite alignment with any particular sartorial period or epoch.

* * *

THE DRAWING today shows a splendid example of the type of velvet frock discussed in this message. It is by Lenief, and aside from its charm and distinction, it is noteworthy for its puffed sleeves, a style that fits well into the general silhouette and design of this black velvet frock. The bodice is draped across at the front and shirred into a point at the top of the skirt in back. Below the flat hipline the skirt flares into a circular silhouette and is of even floor clearing length.

Ruth Louise Seabeck Marries Ernest Frey

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Seabeck, of New York and Stockholm, Sweden, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ruth Louise Seabeck, to Ernest Frey, of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, which was solemnized Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon, in Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, Pittsburgh. Officiating was the Rev. Albert E. Day.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Yale and of the law school of the University of Pittsburgh, and is a Pittsburgh attorney.

Margaret E. Lindsey To Wed September 29

Miss Margaret E. Lindsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cahill, of Westmoreland street, has chosen September 29 as the date for her marriage to Raymond K. Jonnet. The ceremony will take place at 9 o'clock that morning in Corpus Christi Church, East End.

Fall Frocks

. . . find their inspiration in imported WOOLENS

Could there be anything more practical? When worn with a fur neckpiece, the woolen frock is the ideal fall attire. Rodier created the colourings, from Mexican tiles, wines, greens and unusual reds.

The new season finds expression in unusual necklines and in the treatment of sleeves. There are touches of fur, stitchings of angora, and flowing scarfs to supplant collars.

Of course Crepe Dresses are being worn, especially for afternoon informals. These are daring in colour, with brilliant shades combined with dark tones. Oftimes you'll see the top of the frock one colour and the skirt entirely different.

ARTISTS FROLIC TO CELEBRATE NEW COMICS

14 Famous Cartoonists Broadcast Festival Over Huge Newspaper Feature

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—While Robert L. Ripley told "believe-it-or-not" secrets about them, 14 famous comic strip artists last night broadcast a program celebrating inauguration of a new, gigantic comic section in the Hearst Sunday newspapers, including the Pittsburgh Sunday Sun-Telegraph starting next Sunday.

The cartoonists convened in the studio of WEAF. Ripley's remarks, the "Wisecracks" of Arthur "Bugs" Baer, master of ceremonies, and the answers of the artists were carried to millions of listeners over 71 stations of the National Broadcasting Company.

COMICS DESCRIBED

During the program, from 9 to 9:30 o'clock, announcers described the 16-page section, containing 32 colored comics, which will appear in the Hearst Sunday newspapers beginning next Sunday.

Cartoonists present were A. H. Knerr, "Katzenjammer Kids;" Pat Sullivan, "Felix the Cat;" Rube Goldberg, "Boob McNutt;" Grace Drayton, "Dolly Dimples;" Billy De Beck, "Barney Google;" Russ Westover, "Tillie the Toiler;" Chick Young, "Blondie;" Paul Fung, "Dumb Dora;" Lyman Young, "Tim Tyler's Luck;" Walter Hoban, "Rainbow Duffy;" Milt Gross, "Dave's Delicatessen;" Cliff Sterrett, "Polly and Her Pals;" Fred Opper, "Happy Hooligan," and Jack Lait.

Percy Crosby, creater of "Skippy" and George McManus, of "Bringing Up Father," were unable to be present.

'BELIEVE IT OR NOT'

Ripley's statements, each prefaced by the "Believe It or Not" of his cartoons, were:

Comic strips by the artists present appear in 2,000 newspapers, 71 countries and 21 languages.

Rube Goldberg is a graduate civil engineer, and the things he built were so funny he had to become a cartoonist to make a living.

Two Youths Accused Of Robbery Effort

Woods Run police surprised two youths attempting, they said, to force entry to the Horst-Mooney garage, 3415 California avenue, early today.

The prisoners, William Krewolski, 21, of 45 Cartright street, and William Kunert, 25, of 101 Hoffman street, admitted, police said, the robbery of the Ondex market, 2827 Preble avenue, several days ago.

Art Dealer Kisses Mother, Kills Self

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Sept. 16.—(Universal.)—A few minutes after he had kissed his mother good night, Vanglentine Treyvoux, 38, New York art dealer, shot and killed himself in the exclusive Winchester Gardens apartments here last night.

On the bed were two notes indicating Treyvoux had been grieving over estrangement from his wife.

Geologist Missing 29 Days Rescued

SIOUX LOOKOUT, Ontario, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Charles W. Gordon, aviator geologist, who had been missing 29 days since he took off on a flight to Trout Lake, was found today by searchers on the shores of that lake. He appeared to be in good health.

MACHINE DEALT BLOW

It became apparent early last night that both the city and county political organizations had been dealt a punishing blow by the uncontrolled voters. Mansfield assisted in many places by Armstrong, but generally regarded as an independent, took the lead at the start. Surprisingly, McGovern also ran on even terms with Armstrong in city districts which usually have followed the lead of the machine.

The purported alliance between Coyne and Armstrong, sought by former State Chairman W. L. Mellon, never materialized. District after district reported with results that showed both organization leaders had thought first of themselves and had no ideas of reciprocity. Under these circumstances the task of both Mansfield and McGovern was simplified.

There were also indications that Mansfield had been unable to give Armstrong much help, though in some districts the chairman of the county board had thrown votes to the McKeesport Senator. In McKeesport Mansfield's home, the Senator led the ticket easily, but McGovern was second and Armstrong trailed badly.

In the East End Seventh and Eighth wards McGovern and Mansfield ran ahead of Armstrong and Coyne and repeated their victory in the Fourteenth and Nineteenth.

MALONE WARD FOR COYNE

In the Fifth Ward, home of James F. Malone, who quit the Pinchot cabinet rather than support McGovern, and threw his support to Armstrong and Mansfield while denouncing McGovern and Coyne, the latter led, carrying all but a handful of districts.

John J. Verona kept his bargain in the Ninth Ward and carried Coyne and Armstrong with a slight edge to the Oakland Senator.

Congressman P. J. Sullivan encountered trouble in his Sixth Ward in an effort to throw a majority to Armstrong and Mansfield. Coyne carried a number of districts by a substantial margin.

In the first four wards where voting machines were used, the organization candidates led easily, but emphasis was laid on the break between Coyne and Armstrong by the manner in which the Senator led through the influence of "plumper" votes from his followers. Armstrong retaliated with the "plumper" system in his home ward, the Seventeenth.

In Homestead, where Burgess John Cavanaugh had declared war on Coyne, Mansfield and Armstrong showed under both Coyne and McGovern. Rankin, supposed to have been turned in for Coyne through pressure of W. L. Mellon on M. J. Veroskey, gave Coyne a good vote, but Armstrong was in front.

COYNE HOPES FADE

Coyne failed to get the big Pittsburgh lead his backers had predicted. Their forecast was that he would lead Mansfield out of the city by 30,000 and would have a 40,000 margin over McGovern. Incomplete returns indicated he would not have more than half that majority, and this advantage was fading in the north boroughs and townships as well as in the South Hills.

Rival headquarters conceded early that Mansfield had been nominated. The Armstrong management, however, refused to be dismayed at McGovern's strength. The headquarters in the Hotel Henry were barred to visitors early this morning, and squads of scouts were sent out through the county to canvass the situation.

McGovern supporters were fearful that unofficial returns favorable to their candidate might be altered later in some of the controlled city and country districts, and were prepared to protect what they claimed was a victory.

Whatever happens in the battle for the second nomination, it is clear that the city and county machine have been rebuked. Under the most optimistic conditions Armstrong or Coyne will do no more than squeak through.

The Mayor's council slate, for which he exerted unprecedented efforts in a struggle for "vindication" of his administration, seems certainly broken, and his favorite for the commissioner nomination, Coyne, appears defeated.

COURT FIGHT LIKELY

In view of the circumstances surrounding the election it was considered certain that the losers for any place in the event of a close vote would institute court proceedings in an effort to overthrow the face of the returns.

In the decision on other county offices the "Regulars" won easily. District Attorney Andrew T. Park defeated Deputy Attorney General Ralph H. Smith for District Attorney; Sheriff Robert Cain was nominated Treasurer over Henry Tranter and J. Denny O'Neill, Jr., Controller Robert G. Woodside was renominated over Maj. William T. Rees; Samuel D. Foster, incumbent, defeated James O. Corbett for Recorder of Deeds, and there was virtually no contest for the re-elections sought by Prothonotary John Vogt, Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell and Clerk of Courts S. J. Topley.

NELSON BEATS DRY CRUSADER

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 16.—The apparent defeat of Leo H. McKay, Mercer County's dry crusader, in his attempt to regain the office of District Attorney, was the high light of the primaries yesterday. Joseph W. Nelson, Mercer, was the successful candidate, according to returns. McKay carried on war against liquor traffic and gambling for four years. During that time he had his men raid the Sharon Country Club while a party was in progress and two days later his home was bombed.

J. Fred Thomas, present Councilman, easily won the nomination for Mayor of Sharon, and Joseph Franek won in Farrell.

After a hot race, in which 19 candidates took part, William Maitland won the City Treasurer nomination over Attorney Ted Buckley.

Vote Machines Fail In Meyersdale Fight

MEYERSDALE, Sept. 16.—In Meyersdale Borough, only precinct in Somerset County with voting machines, the three voting machines in that district were put out of commission last night after heavy voting. More than 150 voters remained to cast ballots at 6 o'clock, with the machines broken. Election officials made speedy preparations and reverted to the old ballot box days.

Organization Wins In Delaware County

MEDIA, Pa., Sept. 16.—Delaware County Republicans nominated the entire county ticket as endorsed by the organization of which Senator John J. McClure is leader. Howard Kirk, a Media lawyer, independent candidate, lost to District Attorney MacCarter in the contest for prosecutor. William Ward, former Mayor and Congressman, was nominated for Mayor of Chester.

INDEPENDENT NAME DISPUTED

A court battle over the right to use the name "Independent Party" was forecast today. After Deputy Attorney General Ralph H. Frank filed an affidavit seeking to preempt the right to use the name, a previous petition seeking the same object was found filed in an obscure corner of the Prothonotary's office.

The earlier petition was dated August 21, 1931, and was not in the regular file. It was found by a clerk assigned to hunt for it by Prothonotary John Vogt.

The petition was signed by five electors: Elizabeth Bymane, Oliver T. Broadwell, J. E. Broadwell, Lenore C. Ruff and Frederick H. Ruff. It was subscribed to before Herman McCullough, notary.

Deputy Attorney Frank is active in Independent Republican circles and is closely associated with County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern. What, if any, political powers are back of the first petition was not clear from its face.

2 POOR BOARD MEMBERS LEAD

Dr. Walter I. Henderson and Mat J. Clyde Miller, incumbents, are leading in the contest for the three places as directors of the County Poor Board and the third present member of the board, H. H. Dixon, is running sixth in scattering returns from 87 out of 526 districts in the county outside Pittsburgh. Jacob Philip Nill, of McKeesport, is in third place, followed by K. William Schuchman of Dormont who agitated an audit of the board's administration against which a supersedeas was refused in Superior Court today, said Robert A. Foley of Mt. Lebanon.

Returns from the 87 districts give:

Henderson	5 719
Miller	5 683
Nill	4 672
Schuchman	4 046
Foley	3 959
Dixon	3 152

CRAWFORD WINS IN UNIONTOWN

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 16.—Close contests were indicated all along the line in early returns in Fayette County in the half dozen contests among Republicans for city and county offices. It was reported voting machines failed to operate satisfactorily in several districts and county authorities were investigating.

Luther S. Crawford was the Republican nominee for Mayor. The Democrats named William Hatfield. In the Sheriff race Harry E. Hackney was leading for the Republican nomination with John Q. Adams second. For Treasurer Sheriff Thomas A. Aubrey was the leading Republican candidate with County Commissioner George Hibbs second. Republican leaders in the County Commissionership race were Homer S. Burchinal and Fred Challant. Earl Huston was leading Grant Graham for Controller on the Republican ticket.

Dean D. Sturgis had a slight lead over Wade K. Newell for the Republican nomination for District Attorney.

Coyne Alderman Wins in 4th Ward

Alderman Louis C. Wicks, backed by Senator James J. Coyne, defeated P. W. Lally in the Fourth Ward. Returns from a majority of districts gave Wicks a commanding lead. Vote by districts shows:

District	Lally	Wicks
Fourth	264	143
Sixth	99	110
Seventh	76	81
Eighth	41	226
Ninth	56	151
Tenth	62	357

'Fining Squire' Again Wins Office

MILLBOURNE, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP)—D. Martin Yerkes, the "fining squire," staged a political comeback in yesterday's primary by regaining the office he held five years ago before he was sentenced to six months in jail on charges of malfeasance. He defeated the incumbent, C. H. Acheson, by 16 votes, polling a total of 112.

CONTEST CLOSE IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 16.—Washington County polled a heavy primary vote with interest centered in the contests for County Commissioner and County Treasurer.

In a close Republican contest for commissionership nominations J. Elmer Johnston and James W. Walker, who have served three terms in the office, were bunched with County Treasurer John O'Neil on partial returns.

C. F. Carothers, John J. Curran, World War veteran, and Albert A. Berry were running neck-and-neck for County Treasurer.

Officer Gets Bail In Slaying Case

BECKLEY, W. Va., Sept. 16.—Ben Bibb, Oak Hill constable, waived a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace M. F. O'Dell here in connection with the slaying of Luther Honaker, Beckley, and was held under $500 bond for grand jury action on manslaughter charges.

Italian Naval Chief On Way to Detroit

Boxcar Rider Killed Hitting Low Bridge

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 16.—Knocked from a boxcar on a train on which he was standing when it passed beneath a low bridge, Michael Stulock, 22, of West Newton, was killed.

-:- A Thrilling Romance Rich With Adventure and a Girl's Daring -:-

By FAITH BALDWIN

Fanchon's Long Illness Is Followed by Happiness

CHAPTER XXX.

When Fanchon awoke it was to sunlight, subdued by drawn blinds. A strange woman sat beside her . . . a woman in white, with a pleasant, intent face. The woman's fingers lay lightly on her wrist.

"Collin?" whispered Fanchon.

The woman said, smiling:

"You're not to talk. But I am to tell you that everything is all right. You are to take this, and sleep . . . and when you wake you may see Mrs. Carstairs."

Fanchon turned on her side. Presently she slept. Later, she was to learn that she had been ill for ten days, with a complete nervous breakdown and shock . . . and that she had run a high temperature, had been delirious, had wept and begged for forgiveness, had called out for Collin . . . for Collin. And that he had been with her, his hand on hers, the only touch that could steady her back to sanity.

They saw her, and she them, after that, but it was many days before they were permitted to talk to her. Her mind clear again, her body struggling back to life and weak as a baby's she would lie in bed and watch for them to come. For Jennie, who would sit beside her, her hand on hers and smile, and speak softly, reassuringly, for Collin who would sit there also and hold her hands fast and let his eyes tell her that, miraculously, he loved her.

KILLED IN FALL

But finally the day came when Jennie was permitted to talk.

"You need have no fear," she said. He—the man—died instantly. The bullet did not reach him. He missed his footing and fell. It was the fall that killed him. There was a seven days' wonder when it was revealed by police and press that 'Cesare Gilli' was the notorious Antonio Francesconi. There is a reward. Yours," she said. "Your old knowledge of him is known to no one but us."

Fanchon shuddered, and lifted her thin hand . . .

"No—no—" she whispered.

"I understand. Claim it for charity, then," said Jennie, "and after you are better we are taking you South. And then to France, where you will get back your strength quickly . . ."

The tears poured down Fanchon's face. Tears of weakness. She said, brokenly:

"But I have no right . . ."

"Have you not? Do you care anything about me, Fanchon?" asked Jennie Carstairs.

Fanchon turned her lips to the quiet hand that lay there on the bed. She whispered:

"You know. It was real. Everything was real . . . but . . . the name . . . and . . ."

Never mind that . . . Do you love Collin, Fanchon?"

"With all my heart," she said.

GOING ABROAD

"No more today," she said warningly, and obediently Jennie rose. She looked down on the small white face, so very white against the dark curls on the pillow. She said:

"You're not to worry. You—belong to us."

As soon as she could be moved safely Fanchon was taken South. To a quiet little place in Florida, to a small lonely house, set among the palms. Miss Gibbon, the nurse, went with her; and Jennie; and Collin; and some of the servants. And it was all dreamlike. And slowly her strength came back.

"We can sail in two weeks," Collin told her one evening. "The doctor says we may."

She looked up at the great stars and the slender scimitar of the moon. There was a little Gulf wind in the palm trees. She heard the sound of water.

"Collin?" she said desperately. "What is it, darling?"

"I . . . I . . ."

"No, don't say it. Whatever it is, I love you. We will be married before we sail, very quietly."

She said: "Collin, you can't . . . people—what will people say?"

"Does that matter? We are going to live abroad for a long time. Mother is willing. She is homesick for France, I think, and England. Her heart has been there for a long time. Perhaps people will wonder. Some of them will be told. Simply that Evelyn having died, you took her place . . . and her name . . . were, let us say, adopted. What difference does it make how much they wonder, what fault they find with our story . . . ?"

"You see," he added, after an interlude, "it was you we loved. Not Evelyn. But you, yourself. Both of us loved her. And always will. Did my mother never tell you that—that she had not expected to care for Evelyn? From her letters. From the things she knew and which Evelyn didn't confess . . . Darling, I'm glad there was no Commander Gaines . . . and no lithe romantic Hawaiian, after all. Although, after knowing you, I couldn't believe anyone's story. Still, and all, I would not have found excuses for the real Evelyn, I believe . . ."

PLAN FUTURE

"She's . . . dead," said Fanchon . . . "poor little creature." She thought of the trip Collin and Mrs. Carstairs had made, of their return with the body.

"I know . . . but you are alive and mine . . ."

"I haven't," she told him, "said much about Tony. It was loneliness. And I was in love with love. It wasn't like this—and . . ."

"You told me once," he reminded her, "that you had always belonged to yourself. I believed that."

"It was true. It isn't true now. In every way that matters most I belong to you," she said.

After a while Jennie came out to them and they sat there together planning their allied future. Fanchon closed her eyes against the brightness of the stars. . . To belong. . . forever. To Collin. To have the mother she had always longed for. Poor Tony, she thought, dreamily, pity for him welling up in her heart—and poor Evelyn.

But they were dead. And she was, gloriously, alive.

Those Who Say They Never Marry Usually Wed in Six Months—Fay King

By FAY KING.

When a girl is too emphatic about declaring how little a certain man means to her we begin to wonder when they will be married.

When a couple go about proclaiming too loudly their endless love, one begins to suspect that it won't be long now until they are divorced.

When a girl shouts from the house tops how crazy she is about some man, we can't help wonder with whom she really is in love and trying to shield or make jealous.

We are a little inclined to think that it may be the fellow she is always ridiculing and pretending to disdain.

And those who are saying they never will marry usually are married within the next six months.

Madge Thinks Phil Is Again Trying to Break Up Romance

At my outburst of righteous wrath against my husband's young niece for her offensive and atrocious chatter, she clapped her hand over her mouth and backed away from me as a frightened child might have done, her eyes wide with horrified amazement.

"Oh! won't somebody take me out and salt me down in strips?" she wailed. "It's the only thing that will ever cure me of winding up my mouth and letting it go without ever thinking of what I'm saying. I don't wonder you're angry with me, Auntie Madge. I suppose I was saying some perfectly awful things, but honestly, I haven't the faintest idea what they were. I was talking about Phil Veritzen, I know. What did I say?"

"Never mind what you said." I told her, but with the anger left out of my voice. "It is nothing that I ever wish to hear again."

"Oh, I won't," she said eagerly, "but I'm glad you're not forbidding me to tell you about the skinny vamp daughter of old Phil's deceased and mourned friend. I honestly think that if the old bird hadn't had the royal blood idea clamped so tight in his mouth that his teeth couldn't get loose from it, he'd have picked out this la-de-da Lidia Languish for Noel.

"She's an awful mess, but she's gilded with several millions and the halo of her dead papa's friendship for old Phil is around her head. Then, too, she'll pass in a crowd after about three beauty shops have turned their crack operators loose on her for a day or so."

I had a shrewd suspicion that the reason for the extra venom in this description lay in the crumpled letter which she had extended to me, and which I had refused to read. I could not resist the touch of malice with which I quickly asked: "Does 'Noel share your aversion for her?"

"You sure put a fast one over the plate that time, Auntie Madge," she said.

"Noel's the most flea-bitten sap when it comes to judging women that ever was turned loose in a wild and wicked city."

"I wouldn't say that, Mary," I said with a pointed little laugh. "You've been his bright particular star for many moons, you know."

Mary giggled. She enjoys a joke upon herself with a zest that is rare in a woman.

"I sure jumped down the mine shaft and pulled the coal down after me, that time," she said with a wide grin. "But even an anointed idiot has to be right once every year or so, you know."

She jumped up, took her skirts in her hand, whirled around crazily, pirouetted and sank almost to the floor, her finger pointing dramatically to her heart.

"Behold!" she intoned. "The one mistake that Noel didn't make." She put her head cockily to one side, blew a kiss to me and rose to her feet as gracefully as effortlessly as a flower lifting its head after a vagrant breeze has lowered it.

What Noel doesn't know about the ways of a girl who is trying to land a man would fill eight Century Dictionaries and the Encyclopedia Britannica," she went on. "This letter of his tells what a wonderfully spiritual outlook this so-and-so and such-and-such possesses. Somebody once gave her a volume of Whitman in a moment of mental aberration and though she can't spell the man's name or pronounce it either and thinks, if she thinks at all, that 'Leaves of Grass' is a new kind of breakfast food, she knows enough to keep still except for an occasional naive question or two, look soulful and praise a man's reading voice.

"And just to add the salt to the stew, down at the end of the letter Noel sweetly remarks that father hopes I'm getting along well in my studies. Oh, father loves me so, he does. How he ever let me into the sheepfold last Christmas, I don't know, but if I had three guesses—" she stopped short, clapped her hands over her mouth and looked at me with wide-open, frightened eyes.

How to Keep Well

-:- By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND -:-

Vegetables' Vitamins Are Essential to Health

Dr. Copeland

Perhaps the very frequency of the advice is the reason it is so often neglected. We resent what we hear too frequently.

Vegetables are the basis of good nutrition. They are the foundation of good health. They are important at all ages, but children should have every day an abundant supply of this food.

Vegetables carry the vitamins. These substances are of great importance in the maintenance of nutrition and vigorous health.

Vitamin A is regarded by the authorities as the most important of all the known vitamins. Without it children become susceptible to certain infectious diseases. It has its place, too, in the preservation of health in adults.

Lack of this vitamin produces unpleasant eye symptoms, commonly known as "ophthalmia." It may even produce blindness and complications of lesser importance.

Green vegetables such as spinach, radishes, water-cress, lettuce and fresh fruits contain vitamin B. It is found also in peas, beans and glandular organs of animals, notably the liver and kidney.

Vitamin B is particularly valuable in the prevention of a disease known as "beri-beri." Persons deprived of fresh fruits and vegetables may become victims of this disease.

Another vitamin found in vegetables is that known as vitamin C. This acts as a means of protection against the disease known as scurvy.

In addition to its presence in vegetables, vitamin C is abundant in the citrus fruits, lemons, oranges, grapefruit, etc. It is found in tomato juice and, to a certain extent, in potato juice.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Why Do Good People Have a Sneaking Longing to Be Bad?

Why does a perfectly respectable young married woman, who loves her husband and baby, and dotes on her home, feel secretly thrilled when some stranger tries to flirt.

Lottie'd like to know. So would about 468,986 other young married women, whose husbands would throw pink fits if they knew it.

"Is it because I'm cheap and loose and bad?" wails Lottie. "Is it because I'm different from nice women . . . because I have some sort of complex?"

What would you say, if she put that question up to you?

"Dear Sally:

"I am so miserable! I have discovered that I have a Complex.

"I am married, in love with my husband and my baby, and I still am thrilled by and desirous of the attentions of other men.

"What on earth is it? Spring fever? Just plain cheapness? I know what men and boys think of married women who think of other men than their husbands, and carry on flirtations with them (I haven't reached that point yet, thank goodness), yet I seem to like it when other men notice me, or remark that I look nice.

"I am young. Perhaps too young to be married. I am only 20, and I have been married for three years. Maybe I have missed those 'play around' years that most girls have? Do you think that is it. That I just haven't grown up yet? It seems to me that I should be 'wise to myself' by this time. Don't you think so?

HUMAN NATURE

"Am I looking for cheap thrills? Or is it just that I want freedom and playing around because I can't have them? I know it's human nature to want what you can't have. But please believe me when I say that I wouldn't part with my husband and baby for anything, yet I am tempted.

"Oh, please help me! Tell me I'm being cheap and tawdry. Anything. Give me a prescription, and give it strong. I'm having a fight and I need help. What is wrong with me?

LOTTIE."

What ails you?

Nothing very strange or unusual, Lottie. Something that ails all of us and is as old as human life itself. No, it isn't a "complex"—it is just plain human nature and the fight between the two sides of that nature.

Ever stop to think that you had two sides—that every human has two sides—Lottie? Probably not. But we all have. Part of us is Man—the new part of us. Part of us is still Brute—the old, stupid, restless, greedy brute. And those two parts are forever at war within ourselves.

BATTLE FOR DECENCY

You're not a "bad woman" because you feel that fight going on inside you, Lottie. You'd be a very abnormal woman if you didn't feel temptation in some form. And the fact that you didn't have enough play days is probably making it all the harder. But don't let that discourage you. The whole world is fighting with you! Every decent person you know is waging a private war of his or her own. And you, by conquering in your fight, can do something more than help yourself—you can help the world in its battle for decency.

"But how can I conquer?" you cry.

By wanting to conquer!

By telling yourself, over and over, that you do love your family and your home — and that one of your man's dear kisses is worth a thousand furtive smiles from other men—

By saying this over and over, as though it were a prayer—

For it is a prayer, Lottie—

It is the long, constant prayer that has brought us all up out of the mud. So keep on praying, honey. And don't forget to laugh too. Laugh all you can. Cram all the clean fun possible into your married life—your husband needs it as much as you do. And your baby needs it most of all.

TALK ON CHILD ILLS BEFORE HOMEOPATHS

Paper on Tuberculosis, Also Address on Career Slated In State Group's Session

The second day's meeting of the sixty-eighth annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Homeopathic Medical Society, being held in the William Penn Hotel today, was to be devoted to sessions on clinical medicine and pediatrics and materia medica.

At the morning session, Dr. H. W. Hetherington, of the Henry Phipps Institute, Philadelphia, was to read a paper on "Childhood Tuberculosis, Its Nature, Characteristics and Procedure of Diagnosis."

Addresses were also scheduled by Dr. Francis B. Trudeau, of Saranac Lake, N. Y., on diagnosis of pulmonary tuberculosis, and by Dr. George A. Stewart, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, on the present day approach to the problem of cancer.

The materia medica session of the afternoon was to be devoted to discussions by several other speakers.

LOLA LANE WED TO LEW AYRES

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Sept. 16 (Universal).—It seems there's no depression in Hollywood romances for Lew Ayres, screen star, and Lola Lane, featured film actress, stopped here long enough to be married by a judge.

Judge W. E. Orr recessed a murder trial to splice the nuptial knot. The couple accompanied by Leroy Mason and his wife, Rita Carewe, motored here from Hollywood in an automobile which caused the eyes of Las Vegas to bulge. Their honeymoon will be spent hunting in Wyoming.

To the marriage license clerk the screen players revealed themselves as Frederick Ayres and Dorothy Mulligan, respectively, 23 and 22 years of age.

British Rush Work On $22,500,000 Liner

LONDON, Sept. 16 (Universal).—The new giant 73,000-ton British liner Clydesdale, under construction on the Clyde for the Cunard Line, is to be launched in February, nearly six months ahead of schedule. The estimated cost of the Clydesdale is $22,500,000.

The completion of the Clydesdale six months ahead of time was decided upon in order to beat the French liners now under construction, into the trans-Atlantic trade.

Pantages Retrial Delays Girl's Suit

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 16.—Set aside until after the retrial of Alexander Pantages, theater magnate on criminal assault charges, the $1,000,000 damage suit of his alleged victim, Eunice Pringle, dancer, has been continued until next January 11. A jury convicted Pantages two years ago and he was sentenced to serve one to 50 years in the state penitentiary. The State Supreme Court granted him a new trial, which has been set for November 2.

Mobbed, Freed

WILLIAM E. KESSLER

Deputy Constable Kessler, Sixth Ward, suspended city patrolman who gained his freedom in Common Pleas Court early today after he had been mobbed and arrested in an election row. It was his fourth appearance in court in a week.

Council of Churches Hit by Lutherans

BUFFALO, Sept. 16 (AP).—Sharp criticism of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America marked yesterday's sessions of the synodical conference of the Eastern District, American Lutheran Church. The Rev. Henry Meicher, Grove City, Pa., attacked the council's "last pronouncement on the subject of birth control."

FOIL JAIL PLOT PERILING 25

LANSING, Kan., Sept. 16 (AP).—Nine ingenious contrivances in Kansas' confinement system at the State Penitentiary here today, officials revealed, in the form of two frustrated escape plots.

Hand-made firearms, prison officials explained, a secret telephone line and duplication of parts of a guard's uniform were evidence of the thoroughness of the prisoners' plans to break for freedom.

A life-term convict who Monday night disclosed the plot after Warden Kirk Prather said would have cost at least 25 lives, was granted a temporary parole by Gov. Harry Woodring. In fear that an attempt might be made on his life, the informer's name was withheld.

Warden Prather said Wilbur Underhill, of Wichita, Kan., gave a new prisoner had tried to plan to shoot down guards in an early morning dash.

WADSWORTH'S SON VICTOR

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 16 (AP).—Dry and anti-dry forces broke even in the four contests that were fought on the prohibition issue in yesterday's state primary election for nomination for the State Assembly.

The outstanding anti-dry victory was in Livingston County, where James Jeremiah Wadsworth, 24-year-old son of the former United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, finished far ahead of his dry rival for the Republican nomination, Marius Klitgaard.

The other anti-dry victory was in the First district of Schenectady County, where Oswald D. Heck, backed by the Republican party organization and the anti-dry vote, won a close fight with Edgar W. Steinbrink.

BANKER REPAYS CLIENTS, DIES

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (AP).—Leopold Zimmerman, veteran Wall Street banker, who ordered his final words to stenographers, "Tell Jones (rival) who has got to pay him," died at his home in his 76th year yesterday. Physicians said he died happy for he could see he was clear to pay up the last dollar.

Although well past the three-score and ten mark when his firm, Zimmerman & Forshay, was ordered into receivership by the collapse of the old German currency, he was not content that his former clients should get merely a "receiver's settlement." He was allowed to resume business and eventually paid out substantial sums from his earnings from the new firm of the same name to redeem his pledges to old clients. When the firm suspended, losses exceeded $6,000,000.

Mr. Zimmerman was born in Obel-Seemen, Germany, in 1855, came to the United States at the age of 16.

3 Killed, 3 Scalded In Engine Explosion

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Sept. 16 (AP).—Three men were killed and three others seriously scalded today in a boiler explosion on a Lackawanna Railroad freight locomotive as it was helping a 100-car freight train up a steep Erie Railroad grade at Graham, four miles from here.

The explosion hurled parts of the boiler several hundred feet from the scene. The dead were William Mallett, Matamoras, Pa., engineer; Edward Brewster, of Bloomingburg, N. Y., and George Hamilton, of Port Jervis, brakeman.

PITTSBURGH STEEL IN 'RADIO CITY'

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept 16.—Because of radio, hundreds of entertainers have had to change abruptly their whole manner of living. Formerly accustomed to sleeping late in the morning, they are now compelled to greet the dawn that the broadcasting mills may grind.

The moon has scarcely come over the mountains when many of the radio parade are getting ready for the next day's throat-clearings. Arthur Bagley, exercise man; the Landt Trio, John Gambling, Ann Leaf, fiddlers by the score, hordes of singers and gabbers are among the early risers. Most of them are in the studios by the time that the majority of us are sitting down to breakfast.

When they are not broadcasting they are rehearsing their songs and speeches, listening to other programs to check up on their own act. Their radio work precludes practically all social activity. Do they complain? Not so you can hear it. Not while the pesos pour in steadily and plentifully.

What is true of the early morning broadcasters is also true of the grand marshals of the radio procession, of Gibbons and Amos 'n' Andy, of Downey and Vallee and Toscha Seidel and a host of others.

Once able to make life conform pretty much to their own desires, they are now forced to adapt their lives to the routine of radio. The system probably works its greatest hardship on Gibbons. A restless and roving newspaper man, he must find it irksome—but oh, how profitably irksome—to operate on a schedule as rigid as a train dispatcher's. Yet, the very mercilessness of the radio clock deters, they say, many famous people from signing broadcasters' dotted lines.

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin, Radio Editor

Darrell V. Martin

THOUSANDS OF workers in iron and steel in the great blast furnaces and rolling mills of Pittsburgh are to benefit soon from the $250,000,000 building project in New York popularly known as "Radio City" . . . steam shovels, employing hundreds of men, are working day and night preparing an excavation for the largest area building foundation in the world . . . and as soon as work is started on the foundation, orders for millions of dollars in steel will be delivered to the Pittsburgh district. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., announced today . . . An army has been engaged for days wrecking and removing most of the 229 old buildings which stood on the three city blocks from Fifth to Sixth avenues, between Forty-eighth and Fifty-first streets, the site of "Radio City" . . . The number of people employed, directly or indirectly in this mammoth project, will be well over 56,000, which is the numerical equivalent of two regular army divisions 26,000 strong . . . if one man were able to do all the work it would take him 33,330 years.

* * *

Along Broadway

Walter Winchell anticipated two "blessed events" in his broadcast over the Columbia network last night . . . he said that Mr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney are expecting the stork at their home some time in December . . . and that a new arrival is expected soon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Berlin . . . Winchell also said that Peggy Joyce is only 33 . . . published reports have stated her age at 43 . . . Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks are still "on the outs," Winchell declared.

* * *

Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of NBC, cancelled $15,000 worth of programs tonight to give the Red Network a symposium of business conditions from the lips of A. W. Robertson, Gerard Swope and other industrial leaders . . . WCAE at 8:30.

* * *

* * *

What happened Sunday night when we heard part of the Eddie Cantor program of WCAE during the "Uncle Henry" feature on KDKA?—Edward K., Scottdale.

Answer—Eddie Cantor unconsciously made his debut as master of ceremonies on two networks when an NBC control man threw the wrong switch. Those who were listening to Uncle Henry on KDKA were surprised to hear Eddie Cantor from WCAE after the "Editor" had promised listeners that the next voice would be that of Senator Smith W. Brookhart from Washington, D. C. It was only a minute before the error was corrected, but to the anxious participants of the "Editor's" program it seemed like hours.

* * *

* * *

Studio Lights:

Eddie Sprague said to be the highest paid tenor in Pittsburgh churches, was signed today as musical director of WWSW . . .

"Skeets" Miller and a corps of NBC engineers are in Akron, O., preparing to broadcast the dedication of the dirigible "Akron" on Thursday afternoon . . . the description to be from the roof of the hangar and the gondola of a blimp . . .

Coon-Sanders Nighthawks are to be heard regularly over NBC starting early in October . . . the Nighthawks have been awarded the much-coveted Hotel New Yorker contract . . .

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Alexander Gray, star of the "Desert Song," are featured in an exceptional broadcast over WCAE tonight at 8 o'clock . . .

Jean Paul King and George Hicks, announcers for NBC, went through grammar, high school and college together, both starring in athletics.

* * *

Today's Tid Bit:

Allen Thrasher, former KDKA announcer, pens us from Cleveland where he recently visited Tom Waring, Pittsburgh star on the WTAM network . . .

"Tom says I won't sell him an insurance policy, but he bet on Al Smith. We've had a look at the Lake and decided to let well enough alone. Don't break your pledge and write; I want to see how long I can keep up a one-sided correspondence."

BORGIA'S SHADOW -:- Movie Worker Knows The Lethal Art -:- AMUSEMENTS -:- News and Gossip About Theatrical Affairs

Mrs. McGaffy Has Hundred Ways to Rid Screen Of the Villains

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 16.

In Hollywood there is a woman who can tell you 100 novel ways to commit murder.

She is no Borgia, but the head of the research department at the R-K-O studio. Her name is Mrs. Elizabeth McGaffey, and she has been answering difficult questions for 17 years. She was the first research worker of the films.

Mrs. McGaffey's education in the lethal art has come from the collection of thousands of clippings of strange homicides and unusual accidents. She files them away for use when some writer is stumped for a new method to polish off the villain. The clippings have added value, because they reflect actual incidents with enough detail and local color to be of inestimable value in preparing a script.

Elissa Landi

Some of the clippings suggest complete plots. Theodore Dreiser you recall, got the idea of "An American Tragedy" from newspaper accounts of the famous Gillette-Brown murder case.

LEFT-HANDED COMPLIMENTS

It seldom happens that Wilson Mizner is on the receiving end of a joke. Not so long ago, however, a stock actor approached him about a play.

"I want to congratulate you," he said. "I think you have written the greatest play for stock companies I ever read."

In his expansive way Mizner thanked him. Then he asked:

"Why do you like it?"

"Because," said the actor, "you can play any act first."

LATEST GOSSIP

Carole Lombard's illness was brought on by fasting. The doctor now has her on a diet of nourishing foods to put on weight. . . . Coach Howard Jones, of the University of Southern California, received $300 for shaking hands with Dick Arlen, in a scene for "Touchdown." . . . A fifth son was born last week to the wife of Sam Taylor, the director. It happened while Sam was directing a revolution on the Will Rogers' set. . . . Elissa Landi mixes her own perfumes. . . . Roland Young is back in town after a two-month vacation in New York and Narragansett Bay.

Roland Young

The Warner raid which cost them Ruth Chatterton and William Powell gave Paramount a profound shock. They are taking no chances on Marlene Dietrich. The German star has been given a new contract seven months before the expiration of her old agreement.

E. L. Connelly Represents Artists

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation has reorganized and considerably enlarged its club and private entertainment department by appointing seven men, widely known in the entertainment field, to represent it in various sections of the country.

Pittsburgh and the entire tri-state territory has been placed under the executive direction of Eugene LeMoyne Connelly, who during his management of two-a-day vaudeville in the Davis and Grand Opera House set the standard for high-grade, refined variety for the entire Keith-Albee circuit. It was Mr. Connelly's relentless blue pencil which so effectually cleaned up this form of amusement. Under this policy vaudeville reached its greatest popularity and profit.

Mr. Connelly afterward became general manager of the Harry Davis enterprises, which included the Davis and Grand, the Alvin, Pitt, Schenley and a group of smaller houses. When these theaters were sold to the Stanley Company of America, he resigned to accept the vice presidency and general business management of the Harris Amusement Company.

It was under his direction that the Chicago Civic Opera Company and the United States Marine Band played to capacity in Syria Mosque last season. It is understood that he is again to bring the opera company to Pittsburgh.

Mr. Connelly also is exclusive representative in the Pittsburgh area for the Artists Service of National Broadcasting Company, and it is under his direction that "stars of the theater of the air" will make personal appearances here.

Truism

Why worry, dear, in this delightful season
If I have proved untrue—why not be glad?
With your appeal there isn't any reason
Why you should ever want for any lad.

I never claimed to be a saintly creature.
My flesh is weak like any other male's,
And constancy has never been a feature
Of one who scurries off when glamour pales.

I wish you lovely females would discover
That jealousy will always wake a lad,
If you would find yourself another lover,
And quite forget the romance that we had—

I guarantee I'd spend my waking hours
—Lady Chatterly's Lover.

Absolutely!

Wife: "How do you like my new Eugenie hat?"

Husband: "Why don't you buy another so you can throw 'em both away?"

Titter

From Wallace Chittenden comes the bedtime tale of the 5-year-old son who awoke at 3 a. m. and said to his mother:

"Mommy, tell me a story?"

"Hush, dear," replied mother, "papa will be home any hour now, and tell us both one."

Prosperity Item

A music teacher in Chicago, according to Chas. Nixon, had returned from a vacation. A friend halted him on the street.

"You're looking well," said the pal, "and now tell me, How's business?"

"Great! Great!" ejaculated

'One Hour With You,' Next Chevalier Film

"One Hour With You," from the Continental play, "Only a Dream," by Lothar Goldschmidt, will be Maurice Chevalier's next starring vehicle to be started immediately on his return to the United States this month from a vacation in Southern France. The story, to be filmed in Hollywood, will provide Chevalier with a tuneful romantic role, that of a love doctor in Paris.

Jean Harlow Will Play In Newspaper Film

Jean Harlow has been loaned to Columbia by Howard Hughes, to whom she is under contract, to enact a leading role in "Gallagher," newspaper film. After completing this assignment she will play the title role in "Blonde Baby," also a Columbia production based on a story written especially for her.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Make all the cracks you want to about dizzy blondes, and what does it prove about the fact that there will be blondes in "Three Little Girls" and that the performance will be given on a revolving stage? The up-and-down contrivances are not unfamiliar to us, but this will be our introduction to the whirling platform upon which the actors, actresses and just acts will be seen in the Alvin for a week, beginning next Monday. We've stated previously that this is the opening attraction in the Alv., and, come what may, we'll stick to that.

* * *

Small Timer says that for a couple of days or so after he gave his wife a birthday present she seemed to feel like another woman, but that now she's herself again.

* * *

There has been talk that Katharine Cornell would open in a new play in New York as soon as the run of her present vehicle, "The Barrets of Wimpole Street," that city, is concluded. If we can place any faith in press agents, and we can—a little—that will not be the case. Right from Miss Cornell's own official spokesman comes the thundering announcement that as soon as that run is finished she will introduce Elizabeth Barrett and her family in the chief cities of the United States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific—no less. Come next Chewsday and Katherine will have played Brownings' sweetheart a full 250 times on Broadway.

Small Timer says his golf game is fair—only fair—but it could be better if he did as some others who claim to play a fair game.

As If You Didn't Know

From David Murray: On Broadway: If you marry two women that's bigamy. If you marry one woman that's alimony.

Typewriters can now be had that don't make any noise. Most wives would rather hear about stenographers that don't make any bosses.

Novelette

Perry A. Hull, the attorney, has an actor client who has been out of work so long that he has already done a solid 48 weeks in front of the Palace.

He has been trying to sue everyone from Jack Lait, whom he does not know at all, to Sam Katz, whom he knows only slightly. Hull discouraged his legal ambitions, so the actor said:

With his last dime in his pocket and wearing his only loud-check suit and last white collar, he attended a Communist rally.

The speaker was razzing the rich. Finally he looked down at the actor and shook a wicked finger.

"You're the kind of a man I mean," shouted the orator to the actor. "You! you bloated gobbiefish. You wear white collars and good clothes while I wear overalls. You have everything while I have nothing. Get out of here!"

It Really Happened

When the lovely Ruth Etting of Mr. Ziegfeld's Follies appeared in his "Whoopee" show, her specialty was a few songs. "Whoopee" incidentally was her first show, and during the last rehearsal they decided to give her one line to speak.

Her husband, who manages her, watched her first performance breathlessly. When she got through speaking her only line, Mr. Etting raced backstage to Eddie Cantor, the star.

I always knew she could sing, Eddie," he screamed, "but I never realized that she was an actress!"

Add Similes

M. S. L.'s: "She as accommodating as traffic lights when you're late."

And They Suppress Desires!

Fred McIsaac, once a dramatic critic here, and now a Hollywood scenario writer, sends on the following verdict from a lady film agent, who also returned McIsaac's gangster novel.

Her report said in part:

Nifty

It was in Reuben's the other A. M. in the yawning. Prisco was drinking his java from a saucer when Marjorie LaVoe, one of Ziegfeld's headaches, ankled in with a male friend.

Prisco's admiration for the doll was beyond control.

"Gosh!" he ejaculated. "And my mother wanted me to be a night watchman! Where you never see anybody—and those you see—you shoot!"

Vicki Baum to Return To Germany

After six months in Hollywood and New York, where she has been writing for films and gathering material for a Hollywood novel, Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel," will leave the film colony September 28 and sail from New York for Berlin on October 9 to resume the editorship of Der Dame, the magazine from which she was granted a six months' leave for her film work. Her new novel, which she will call "Falling Star," will have a motion picture background, the author reveals. During her visit to Hollywood Miss Baum wrote an original film story which will be filmed by Paramount late this season.

FINAL HEARINGS ON DRY WRITS

Final hearings were to be held today in Federal Court in 72 padlock injunction suits instituted by prohibition authorities. A large majority of the properties involved are in the immediate Pittsburgh district, the others in various parts of Western Pennsylvania.

Each of the suits charges violations of the prohibition law on the premises. Alleged proprietors and owners and proprietors of the properties are named defendants.

Movie Gun Still Works After 51 Killings

A gun that has killed 51 screen stars and players during the past five years is still in active service at Hollywood studios.

Recent notches were added by Peggy Shannon in "Silence" and Tom Douglas in "The Road to Reno."

Man Held in Bail After Fatal Fight

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Sept. 16.—Bradford M. Parrent, Huntington, was held under $3,000 bond on manslaughter charges growing out of the death of E. W. Wilson of Charleston.

Parrent, who said he struck Wilson when the latter tried to stab him, waited a preliminary hearing. Wilson suffered a fractured skull when his head hit a curbstone.

Rogers, Miss Shannon Reunited Again

Charles "Buddy" Rogers and Peggy Shannon, sweethearts in "The Road to Reno," will be reunited as a romantic team in "Working Girls," a story of metropolitan shop workers. The picture will mark the screen debut of Dorothy Hall, creator of the Senatzple in the Broadway production of "The Greeks Had a Word For It." Stuart Erwin will make the comedy lead, and Dorothy Arzner will direct.

All-Request Programs On Stanley Stage

An all-request program will be held in the Stanley Theater today and Thursday by Duke Ellington, headlining the all-Negro stage revue this week. Five complete stage and screen shows are being given daily.

Threatened by letter, he said, he was attacked by five thugs and fired his pistol twice into the ground near a Duquesne polling place.

BONDING FIRM HERE FACES FRAUD QUIZ

Probe Ordered by Mitchell Slated to Open; Concern Also Under Fire in East

Members of a special Federal grand jury were to assemble in Pittsburgh today at the order of Attorney General William Mitchell, to investigate alleged illegal use of the mails by a bonding and mortgage company. The action, authorities say, is due to a suspicion of fraud in many transactions in Western Pennsylvania.

Direction of the probe has been assigned to a Federal lawyer from the Attorney General's office, together with the assistance of United States Attorney Louis E. Graham and his aides.

It is known that the concern under investigation has been the subject of inquiry in New York and Boston, though detailed information has been withheld.

POWERS LINKED IN BAKER DEATH

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—A letter bearing the signature of William M. McCluskey, Box 221, State Farm, Raiford, Fla., has been received by Clarence A. Duckworth, police chief, informing him that Henry P. Powers, held here on murder charges, was connected with the killing of Mary Baker, near Arlington, Va.

Miss Baker, a stenographer, was killed April 12, 1930, and her slayer never has been apprehended.

The letter writer said:

"I have known Powers for about 10 years and can give you a lot of information in regards to his past life. I can prove that he was connected with the Baker murder in Washington, D. C., and which has never been cleared up. So if you care to have me investigate for the state, I will gladly do so. I am at present in confinement here in Florida and have only a few months until I am released."

The man said he was a native of Virginia and had letters "to prove lots" concerning Powers and a matrimonial agency through which Powers corresponded with women. Powers is held here for the killing of two women he met through his correspondence and three children of one of them.

DRIVER CALLED TO OFFICE OF CORONER

Center Avenue Youth Hurt By Hit-and-Run Car That Makes Dash Across Lawn

James Karaholer, 60, Warrendale, died last night in Suburban General Hospital, Bellevue, from a fractured skull he suffered when he was struck by an automobile near his home Saturday.

The car that hit Karaholer is said to have been driven by Ralph McKee, of Federal street, North Side. McKee has been ordered by county detectives to report to the coroner's office today.

Pollock was struck on Hobart street, Squirrel Hill, when a car hit a parked auto belonging to Jacob Levy, 5728 Hobart street, caromed into Pollock, swerved over the Levy lawn, regained the street and disappeared. Max Slinger, 87 Roberts street, a companion of Pollock's, said he was unable to obtain the hit-run license number.

DRYS SEEK RULE OVER BOTTLES

A Federal Court order was to be asked today in the disposal of a freight car load of empty bottles, seized by special agents of the Department of Justice and prohibition agents in the Willow Grove yards of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and several thousand other empty bottles found in the plant of the Glenshaw Glass Company, Inc., at Glenshaw yesterday.

More than 14 truck loads of the bottles were hauled to the government warehouse in Allen avenue. The bottles in the glass factory were not disturbed. The seized shipment was consigned to the "American Bottle Company, Rochester, N. Y." Authority for the raid was based by federal agents on a claim that they have proof the bottles were designed as containers for whisky and other intoxicants.

Government agents declared that letters designating the brand of whisky intended for the bottles had been blown into them. Enough bottles were seized at the factory, agents said, to fill nearly a dozen freight cars. The value of the bottles was estimated at $25,000 by agents, while machinery and moulds confiscated, they said, represent a value of more than $50,000.

ALL IN A DAY —:— By Mark Hellinger

Unsung New Yorkers

IT WAS ABOUT 25 years ago, as James Burbridge outlines the story, that Mr. Baum arrived in the City of New York. His capital and his English were both limited, but his ambition to make money knew no bounds. In due time, then, he opened his own little bakery shop and was soon able to send back enough money to bring Mrs. Baum to America. So much for our beginning.

When Mrs. Baum added the first feminine touches to that little flat above the bakery everything was, as Damon Runyon says, strictly Jake. Mr. and Mrs. Baum were very much in love, the future of the business looked very bright—and they were both working toward one goal. They were going to work hard; raise a few children and then retire to a home in the country. Yes, sir; that same old home in the country.

After a while, the first child was born. Soon there was another. And before the first child was six years of age, a third little Baum arrived. It goes without saying that the birth of these children didn't make the wife any stronger. She told her husband about it, but time had changed the man. He insisted that she continue with her work around the store.

"Already you want to retire?" he grumbled. "Don't talk such nonsense. We have many years to go yet before we can afford luxuries. I can't run the bakery alone. Business is too good. When you're finished with the children, you must help me."

Mrs. Baum wanted to suggest a maid to help her with the children. Servants were a dime a dozen in those days, and her husband could well afford that slight help. But she was afraid to ask him now; afraid because she knew what his answer would be.

Five more years went by and, aside from the birth of two more children, there was no change in the Baum routine. Mrs. Baum was still working around the bakery, and the money was still rolling in. It was rolling in, however, to the husband. Mrs. Baum saw none of it. Whenever she wanted a few trifles for herself Mr. Baum gave her long lectures on economy.

"Over in the old country," he told her, "my mother was happy if my father provided her with sufficient bread. She bore 10 children besides me and never once complained.

"Why should you be different? Why should I have to make comparisons between you and my dear mother? Haven't you a home—and your children—and a husband who provides for you?"

It began to dawn on Mrs. Baum that her husband was a cold, selfish, mercenary man. She began to realize that, while he was about, that elusive thing called happiness would never be hers. And, as the years rolled along, she began to hate this man just as fervently as she had loved him in the beginning . . .

For some time, Mrs. Baum had known that her husband was going around with other women. She had found a few notes that he carelessly left around the house, and she trailed him one night in another taxi. But, as usual, she said nothing. Why let the neighbors gloat? And why make her children a laughing stock when she had labored so hard to keep them clean and decent? So she did the best possible thing and kept her knowledge to herself. An unusual woman, Mrs. Baum.

"How much longer must we keep working?" she asked him. "Surely, by this time you have sufficient money for our little place in the country. It would be so much better for you. It would be very much better for the children. It would be—"

Mr. Braum interrupted her very definitely.

"You will please get such ideas out of your head," he said harshly. "With the money coming in as it is, this is no time to speak of retiring. And as for the children, they are going to work in the bakery as long as I live.

"You will do me a favor by not being more stupid than most women. We are staying where we are." . . .

Husband and wife were alone in the store one afternoon when a young man limped in. He had a peculiar, dragging limp. And as he asked for a loaf of bread, his voice was high—like a child's.

Mr. Braum got the bread and tossed it into a bag. He handed the package to the customer, only to find himself looking into the muzzle of a revolver.

"Give me the money in that drawer," he said with a childish voice. "If you fight, I'll kill you."

Mrs. Baum never moved. She was too afraid to scream. She pawed at her mouth and looked down with large eyes.

Her husband was undecided. There was but $20 in that cash drawer, and Mr Baum should have handed it over without the slightest hesitation. His love for money, however, got the best of him. He made a pass at the hold-up man. A bullet went through the baker's heart. The young man limped hurriedly from the store.

A few minutes later the doctor arrived. He had no work to do. Mr. Baum had saved his $20 and lost his life.

At the funeral Mrs. Baum wept. It astonished neighbors that she didn't carry on a bit more. Mr. Baum had been such a good man; such a hard worker and a generous provider. More than that, funerals were big events in the neighborhood. People were remembered for the manner in which they went into hysterics for some one who had died. They wondered why Mrs. Baum didn't take greater advantage of her opportunity. Why there were even photographers present!

We who know can understand Mrs. Baum's thoughts. She grieved for her husband, of course. After all, they had been together many, many years. But there were compensations. Now she could have her home in the country. Now her children could grow as she wanted them to grow. Now the last of her life could be spent in peace instead of misery.

Yes, there were compensations . . .

* * *

A few days later Mrs. Baum was summoned to the police station. A detective explained the situation to her. They had caught what they thought was the man who had killed her husband. All they needed was her identification. The woman nodded. Soon they brought in the suspect. He was a young man with a peculiar dragging limp. When he spoke his voice was high—like a child's. He looked at the woman with terror in his eyes.

Mrs. Baum shook her head.

"That's not the man," she explained. "The man who killed my husband had no limp. And when he talked his voice was deep." . . .

They released the suspect. As Mrs. Baum walked slowly up the block the young man stepped up to her. He had been waiting.

"I don't know why you did it," he said. "But thank you."

Mrs. Baum did not stop.

"Don't be a fool," she muttered. "Thank you." . . .

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept 16.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

London has had lots of conferences. There was enough fuss made over the disarmament one to fix the whole world for years. Our delegates went by special boat. Dressmakers worked for months before, but a skinny little fellow with nothing but a breechcloth, a spinning wheel and a goat comes there representing more humanity and with more authority than all the high hats in the world. It's sincerity versus diplomacy. Viva Gandhi!

Yours, Will.

Man Indicted as Kidnaper Of North Side Mother

Samuel Buzzelli, Pittsburgh mill worker, arrested July 21 in Baltimore for the abduction of Mrs. Theresa Guglilmucci, 22, mother of two children, was indicted in Baltimore yesterday by a federal grand jury on a charge of violating the Mann Act.

Buzzelli, 35, denied charges brought against him by Mrs. Guglilmucci, saying she accompanied him voluntarily and was not detained against her will.

The woman, whose husband, Michael, and two children, Daniel, 5, and Joseph, 4, live at 1808 Manhattan street, Pittsburgh, said Buzzelli threatened to shoot her if she did not accompany him, and that she was held prisoner in a room for several weeks. One day, she declared, she escaped long enough to telegraph here to her parents, who communicated with police.

Fayette County Buys Bridges At Cut Rates

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 16. Bridge prices were slashed radically when the liquidating trustees of the Washington Run Railroad Company sold to Fayette County for $4,000 a 400-foot bridge over the Youghiogheny River and three smaller ones over Washington Run, that cost more than $100,000.

The trustees, M. M. Cochran, John M. Coe and M. F. Strawn, threw in rights of way for two miles of highway. The County Commissioners plan to use the bed of the railroad tracks leading from Route No. 51 to the Layton Bridge over the river, as base for the new highway.

LIGHT BEAMS USED IN PHONES

A photomatic telephone operating by means of light beams instead of wires was demonstrated by Dr. Phillips Thomas, research engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, yesterday before the International Association of Electrical Inspectors, Eastern and Western Sections, in the William Penn Hotel.

Dr. Thomas said was the privacy it affords.

He explained that by dialing the proper number on a standard telephone and voicing commands in the mouthpiece, he was able to set in motion a selected number of operations actuated by the receiving mechanism of the telephone. The merit of the device, he said, was the privacy it affords.

A fire safe guard robot with an electrical eye which directs a gas on it also was demonstrated.

NECKTIE OPTION WINS ELECTION

Chester Jacobs and J. C. Phillbar, candidates for the Avalon School Board, who promised pupils of the borough if they were nominated they would see to it that the pupils could attend classes without neckties won the nomination, returns showed today.

The two candidates made the promise yesterday when scores of Avalon High School pupils were sent home because they appeared in class without neckties.

While votes were being cast at the various polls in the borough the pupils gathered about the voting places to assist in the nomination of the two men.

Jacobs and Phillbar said they could see no reason why the pupils should be forced to wear neckties especially in hot weather, and promised that their first act would be to abolish the necktie rule.

SLAYS WOMAN; KILLS SELF

A man and woman were dead and another woman was in the Sewickley Valley Hospital today suffering injuries which may cause her death after the man, estranged from his wife, ran amuck in Finley Township shortly after midnight, according to police.

The dead man was Joseph Martin, 38, Negro, of 236 Chartiers avenue, Crafton. He discharged a shotgun into his head after police said he had shot and killed Fanny McDonald, 35, of 615 Run street, Carnegie, a sister-in-law, and seriously wounded his wife, Jesse, 35.

Police said Martin, who had been estranged from his wife, went to the home of the sister-in-law last night and invited the two women to accompany him to a picnic. Near the Cliff mine in Finley Township he is alleged to have ordered them from his automobile and shot them. He returned home, police said, where he placed the barrel of the shotgun in his mouth and discharged it with his foot.

3 MEN QUIZZED IN BANK HOLDUP

Greensburg state police today were to continue questioning three men arrested in Pittsburgh in connection with the robbery of the First National Bank of Smithton, Pa., early in August. The holdup cost the bank $1,000, the five bandits overlooking $28,000 in cash secreted in the vault.

The men arrested by city detectives who found them seated in an automobile at Fifth avenue and Jumonville street, last night gave their names as Mitchell Bond, 29, 134 S. Beatty street; Frank Valenti, 21, 2024 Fifth avenue, and Neil Mooch, 24, of Mound City. They were turned over to the state police.

Since the robbery, detectives say, they have been seeking Bond, also known as "Hunky Mike," Mooch and Valenti, although not yet linked with the robbery, will also be questioned, detectives say.

Sentenced to Die, Stunned by Reprieve

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Sept. 16 —AP.—August Gingell, whose sentence to death for the murder in Los Angeles of his wife and a man he found in his home, was commuted Monday to life imprisonment, has found himself "stunned" by the chance to live.

He said:

"I'm so stunned I scarcely know what it's all about. I'd given up hope and resigned myself to die. After a few months in death row, the thought of the gallows soaks into a fellow's mind and he just can't get it out."

OFFICER HURT BY SUSPECT

Patrolman Matt McGraw, of Central Station, was sent to Mercy Hospital early today after a man he was arresting threw him through a window of the Colonial Supply Company at 216 First avenue. Patrolman Mike Novickey, who went to the policeman's assistance, aided in taking the prisoner to the police station.

CASE TO OPEN IN COURT AT GREENSBURG

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 16.—William A. Malunney, A. B. Baklarz, Paul Heberling, Fred DeMarko and James Cardon, Pittsburgh youths, will be placed on trial in Criminal Court here Thursday on charges of robbery, carrying concealed weapons, felonious assault and pointing firearms resulting from a holdup at the home of John Young, at Penn, Westmoreland County, the night of August 2.

The five defendants, it is alleged, visited Young's home while a number of guests were present, held up the place and shot and wounded Mrs. Young when she resisted the robbery.

Albert Gaffner, 27, giving his address as Pittsburgh, is in jail here following his arrest by Scottdale police, who say they captured him in an attempt to rob a gasoline station.

Gaffner denied attempting to rob the station, claiming, according to police, that he had come to Scottdale with another Pittsburgh man who entered the station, but escaped.

FLAMES SWEEP 3 IRWIN STORES

IRWIN, Pa., Sept. 16.—Several persons were forced to the street, a fireman was overcome by smoke and another cut by flying glass in a spectacular fire which swept through three business houses here early today with an estimated loss of between $10,000 and $12,000. A city block was threatened.

Guests of the Commercial Hotel adjoining the fire-swept buildings were forced to flee to the street in night attire.

Firemen from Irwin, Jacktown and Larimer brought the flames under control after a three-hour fight.

Originating in the basement below the Clink barber shop and the I. Gellman & Sons clothing store, the flames spread to the Gem restaurant adjoining. Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson and their two children, Charles Edward, 4, and Louise, 14, asleep in an apartment over the Clink barber shop, fled to the street after Mrs. Nelson discovered the fire and sounded the alarm.

James Gilchrist, overcome by smoke, was carried to the street by two companions, William L. Good and William Lewis. Aldo Cerbi received a severe gash on his right hand by flying glass. Both are Irwin firemen.

RELIEF SCHOOL PLAN SUCCESS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—President Hoover's unemployment relief organization announced today a nation-wide response to its "back to school" movement.

The relief group has been conducting a campaign to keep young people in school to prevent them from competing for jobs with heads of families and losing educational advantages.

The movement has been indorsed, the organization announced today, by school authorities, educators, Chambers of Commerce, service associations, character building societies and women's organizations.

The relief group made public communications from all sections of the country commending the movement, pledging co-operation, and telling of local plans for promoting school attendance.

4 DEAD IN PLANE DIVE INTO SEA

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A passenger-mail plane of the Pacific Air Transport lines caught fire and plunged into San Francisco Bay today, carrying its pilot and three passengers to death.

Shortly after taking off for Portland the plane evidently caught fire and its pilot, Ray Bouderaux, of Medford, Ore., turned back toward the airport. He was attempting to effect a safe landing when flames enveloped the ship and it dived several hundred feet, striking the water and sank.

The passengers were: Kirk Herre, of the Seattle Star, Seattle; W. H. Bissel, San Francisco; F. I. Sheehan, San Francisco.

The craft carried 400 pounds of mail, the value of which was unknown to airport officials.

U. S. Pushes Probe Of Police Brutality

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(Universal)—Evidence charging 50 assaults upon prisoners by about 25 policemen here in brutal third-degree methods will be presented by the Department of Justice to the grand jury today. Many indictments of policemen will be asked, it was indicated.

Five police officers already have been indicted for brutality to prisoners in an investigation ordered by President Hoover.

Wallace Beery Wins $25,244 Judgment

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—(AP)—A judgment of the Superior Court made Wallace Berry, screen character actor, technically richer by $25,244.58.

The court awarded him the sum in a suit against Mr. and Mrs. Monte C. Brice, of New York, and H. T. Carey, real estate dealer, who, Berry claimed, had failed to pay a note for $20,000.

STORE BANQUET FETES 1,000

More than 1,000 members of McCreery's staff were guests at a banquet tendered last night by the management in the store's dining room, heralding the approaching observance of the twenty-seventh anniversary of the founding of McCreery's.

Arthur C. Kaufmann, vice president and general manager, urged fidelity to duty, predicting better business ahead. He said:

"Perplexing problems face us every day, but they are met and conquered because we all stand together. These are times when only the fittest will survive—those stores with ample capital, able management, co-operative organization and economical operation.

"We are most sympathetic with your problems. We realize you have serious problems to meet—we have ours. Let us bear with each other in this emergency and work doubly hard during this emergency. Your dollars must do double duty and so must ours. I have the utmost confidence in the future and all of us will be better for the experiences we have been through. With confidence and perseverance we shall most certainly weather conditions."

Dr. Duncan Will Speak on Europe

Pajamas of Girls Fail to Bring School Ban

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Beach pajamas for school wear made their appearance yesterday.

Some of the young girls in a grade school wore them, and if they expected the school authorities to object they were disappointed. Said the principal, Frank A. Fucik:

"I think the beach pajama a cool and sanitary garment during these warm days and children who are comfortably dressed have nothing to interfere with their application to their studies."

G. A. R. STAGES 66TH REVIEW

DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Men who marched with Sherman to the sea marched again here today in the yearly parade of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The story of the grand review has been told 65 times before, but its re-enactment today before thousands was as inspiring as when, flushed with victory, 2,000,000 youths swung along in the first triumphal march in the nation's capital.

Of those two million less than a thousand marched today. Nearly as many more were in automobiles—time has not dulled their keen spirit, even though legs have grown infirm.

The line of March was 17 blocks long. Some years ago it was two miles, and, before that, longer.

Connelly to Trace Constitution Growth

Eugene I. Connelly, speaking over KDKA tonight at 6:15 for the Pittsburgh Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, will trace changes made in the United States Constitution in the 143 years since its adoption.

CHILDS' HEAD PRAISES 'ADS'

Newspaper advertising was hailed as the most effective means of dealing with present business conditions by F. C. Lane, senior vice president and operating head of Childs Company, at the formal opening yesterday of Childs' Spanish restaurant in the Park Building. He said:

"We increased our advertising budget and appropriated virtually all of it for newspaper use, the moment we discovered a general retardation of the business pulse. The results in dollars and cents show the extra expenditure has amply paid for itself."

Announcement was made of a "Hall of Fame" to be conducted by the restaurant, photos of prominent men to be placed in the restaurant windows each week. Selection will be made by a committee of Pittsburgh newspapermen and theatrical representatives.

Allegheny River Group Plans Session

Arrangements are being completed for the annual convention of the Allegheny River Improvement Association September 24. Delegates will receive information as to the accomplishments of Federal engineers in the building of five locks and dams to slackwater 55 miles of river. An inspection trip is scheduled with a stop to be made at Kittanning to view the bridge being constructed across the river.

Review of Cereal Making Ban Asked

The Labor Products and Ice Company, of Brackenridge, has filed a petition before Samuel O. Wynne, Philadelphia, commissioner of industrial alcohol, for a review of ther evocation of the company's permit to manufacture cereal beverages.

Attorney Robert M. Ewing, for the company, said no date has been set for hearing of arguments.

LOOK OUT!

If This Deception is Attempted Against You

THIS warning is printed to put the public on guard against a deception which may be practised against those who seek genuine Bayer Aspirin for pain, headaches or colds.

We take this means of warning you, so you may be able to protect yourself and your family against the results of such deception.

BEWARE!

Other preparations, we are informed, have been offered at times to those who ask for Bayer Aspirin; and even represented in some cases as "the same as Bayer Aspirin."

Watch Out! Remember that years ago doctors warned the public against "headache remedies," some of which are heart depressants and unsafe for many people to take.

Then remember how Genuine Bayer Aspirin came. And was acclaimed the world over by leading men of science as SAFE relief for pain, and was prescribed without hesitation by eminent physicians. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

What folly, then, in the light of these things, to dose yourself with drugs of which you know nothing. Don't gamble—KNOW.

The genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets are made by a special process, under careful supervision of scientists, in the Bayer Laboratories, with over 25 years of highly specialized experience.

So when you want SAFE relief for pain, cold or headache, ask for BAYER ASPIRIN. You have a perfect right to ask for what you want. And an equal right to get what you ask for.

Look for the name BAYER on the package. And the word Genuine in red. Insist on Genuine Bayer Aspirin and refuse substitutes.

HARD TO REPLACE RARE PASSING DUO

NOW THAT GRADUATION has taken away Ganzy Benedict and Sammy Pratt, Duquesne University's famous forward passing combination in football, and since the Dukes this spring this year have failed to develop either a capable tosser or an efficient receiver, it is problematical what sort of team the Bluffites will have for 1931. The local season opener between the Red and Blue gridders and Geneva College at Forbes Field Friday night ought to furnish a pretty good line on the situation and give an idea how the Bluffites are going to rate as a passing eleven.

Ganzy Benedict

During the undefeated season of 1929, the first in Duquesne history and a definite indication, two years after he had taken over the coaching reins, that Elmer Layden, of Notre Dame Four Horsemen fame, was making progress on the Bluff, forward passes were the mainstay of the Red and Blue attack. They were prominent, too, in each of the other years of the Layden regime. In fact, that particular play was a Duke specialty and the team's most formidable weapon.

AND THE MAJORITY of those passes were from Benedict left halfback to Pratt right end. The Dukes were called the Merriwell Boys because of their last-minute story-book victories and both Benedict and Pratt, the heroes of most of the stirring finishes, won places of fame in Duquesne's hall of gridiron greats.

Photographs of the pair in passing and receiving roles are to be found in Dr. Hugh C. Muldoon's football museum in Canevin Hall on the Bluff. Dr. Muldoon is dean of the school of pharmacy, and is the Dukes most ardent rooter. He follows wherever the gridders go, no matter where that may be.

THE MEMORABLE INSTANCES of the forward passes brought success to Duquesne began with the Thanksgiving Day game on the Bluff in 1927, when a forward from Quarterback Mumpes to Benedict in the last minute of play produced a touchdown and the six points needed for an 8-to-7 victory. The Dukes having previously made two points on a safety.

Against W. & J. in Washington, Pa., in 1928 a forward from Benedict to Joe Guerriere in the dying moments of the game brought the second Duke touchdown and a 12-to-6 triumph. Benedict's try for extra point was blocked as the gun cracked.

IN 1929, a Benedict-to-Pratt pass near the finish gave the Laydens a 7-to-7 tie with West Virginia at Morgantown. Capt. Buff Donnelli booting the extra point from placement. Against Loyola, of Chicago, at Forbes Field, a toss from Joe McCarthy to Doggo Burns near the end of the game, brought the touchdown needed for a 7-to-6 victory, Donnelli contributing the extra point. A timely flip from Benedict to Burns in the closing moments resulted in a win over ... University at Washington, D. C., 19 to 13, and a late fling from Benedict to Pratt, enabled the Dukes to defeat the Haskell Indians at Forbes Field, Donnelli's trusty toe again adding the extra point. Last year in Chicago, the Bluffites defeated Loyola by taking an early lead on a touchdown resulting from a pass from Benedict to Pratt, the last scoring forward in the Duke careers of these two sterling players.

Art Shires

RECENTLY LOUIS NAHIN, president of the Milwaukee baseball club, made it known that the Boston Braves had first chance to buy Art Shires, adding that Shires would not be sold to the Cubs and that there had been no negotiations for the sale of the player to the Athletics, as reported.

Thus far, unless it has been done secretly, the Brave management has not moved to take advantage of the privilege of buying the talkative first sacker. If the Hub bosses or any other big leaguers desire to purchase Shires they can't afford to wait much longer, as by reason of having already played in the majors Art will become subject to draft on September 30 and they'll be running chances of losing him to another club having prior claiming rights.

THOUGH THERE IS no doubt that the A's and Cardinals will again be the principals in the 1931 renewal of baseball's blue ribbon number starting October 1, one-half of the "little world series" which is to open one day earlier is still up in the air.

St. Paul has the American Association pennant sewed up, but the fight between Newark and Rochester in the International League, with Baltimore right at their heels is so close that the identity of the team that will tackle the Saints may not be known until the season ends on September 21.

WITH THE EXCEPTION of Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw, main factors in the capture of the pennant clinched yesterday by the A's, it would be hard to point out two members of any club staff in the big leagues who have been doing better or more consistent work for their club in recent weeks than has been turned in by Larry French and Heinie Meine for the Pirates. In pitching the Bucs to a double victory over the Robins yesterday, in which they allowed a total of only three runs, and cut the first-division distance to two-and-a-half games, the young southpaw and the veteran righthander continued a brilliant drive that has had much to do with the rise of the Rovers from the depths of seventh place.

MEINE, WHO HUNG up his seventeenth victory yesterday, has won five games in a row, and 11 of his last 12, and in his five straight wins he has allowed only nine runs. French, who now has 16 triumphs to his credit, has won nine of his 12 games, and in winning his last three he has allowed a total of only four runs.

Both Larry and Heine rank with the hardest working hurlers in the majors this year. French has passed Earnshaw as well as Grove to lead both leagues in innings pitched with 268 to his credit, and Meine isn't far behind him with 245.

AN OLD PIRATE passed on in the death at Los Angeles of Frank E. Dillon, 58, manager of the Pacific Coast League club of that city from 1904 to 1910, and a cousin of Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club.

The Pittsburgh club bought Dillon as a first baseman from the Washington club in the fall of 1899. He finished the season here and was one of the Pittsburgh players retained for 1900 after the consolidation with Louisville, but he was released early in the year after playing in only five games and joined the Detroit club. Dick Cooley succeeded him at first base for the Bucs.

Al Mamaux

NO PENNANT-WINNING manager in the country this year will be entitled to a larger share of credit for his team's success than will be due to Al Mamaux if Newark wins out in the International. To his clever leadership, the former Pittsburgher has added some mighty capable pitching, and he contributed one of the high spots of the baseball year yesterday by stepping to the front for his club in the heat of the sizzling fight with Rochester and Baltimore in the home stretch, and not only pitched both games of a double-header against Reading, but won a pair of victories in sensational style, allowing only one run and seven hits in the two games. Newark will have Mamaux more than any other factor on the team to thank if the city wins the pennant this year for the first time in 18 seasons and the second time in its International League career.

CREAVY 2 UP ON LOCAL ACE AFTER 18

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 16. Peter O'Hara, of the Westmoreland Country Club, Pittsburgh, who yesterday eliminated Walter Hagen, was 2 down to Tom Creavy, of Albany, N. Y., after 18 holes of their 36-hole second round match in the Professional Golfers' Association championship here today.

Pete O'Hara

O'Hara shot sparkling golf on the out nine when he matched par 35 to become 2 up at the turn, but he was unable to win a hole on the homeward journey, halving five and losing four. The former Irish champion was putting as well as usual, but had trouble with his second and chip shots. The cards:

O'Hara	out	4	4	3	4	4	4	4	5	5	35
Creavy	out	4	4	3	4	5	5	4	4	4	37
O'Hara	in	4	5	4	4	5	3	5	5	6	40	75
Creavy	in	4	4	3	4	4	3	4	3	5	36	73

GENE SARAZEN LEADS

Hitting a 72 pace, Gene Sarazen of Great Neck, L. I., finished the morning round 4 up on Paul Runyan of the Metropolis Club at White Plains. Runyan, the North and South champion, won only two holes this morning.

Horton Smith, of Detroit, despite a rating of 77, was 3 up on Willie MacFarlane, former open champion, who blew skyhigh, taking 83 blows. He could not adjust his iron shots to the brisk breeze which forced a radical change in tactics on the short holes.

Abe Espinosa, Chicago, and Bill Mehlhorn, New York, finished the first 18 all even, and Denny Shute, comingof Hudson, O., played par golf, coming back to gain a 2 up lead on Jim Foulis, of Chicago. They were deadlocked at the turn. Shute's round of 71 was the lowest of the day. Foulis had a 76.

GOLDEN TRAILS WALKER

Cyril Walker, of Ridgewood, N. J., was 1 up on Johnny Golden, Noroton, Conn., when they quit for lunch. The latter had a 3-hole lead at the turn, but Walker started in with a rush, taking the tenth and eleventh with par 4s, lost the short fifteenth by missing a putt, and then won the last three with pars.

Billy Burke, open champion, dropped only one of the first 18 holes to Bob Crowley, of Haverhill, Mass., and was 5 up at halftime. A stymie gave Crowley the eighth with a par 3, and he laid on the eleventh, halved in 5s. Burke had a 73 and Crowley was 79.

Art Shires Can Be Claimed for $7,500

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 16. Art Shires, Milwaukee Brewers' first baseman and second leading batter in the American Association today can be claimed by a major league club for the draft price of $7,500.

President Louis M. Nallin, of the Milwaukee Club, said no offers had been received for Shires and that the St. Louis Browns had made no move to claim him.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE VIOLIN OF MATCHES—Robert L. Ratte, of 176 Cherry street, Springfield, Mass., in constructing a violin out of ordinary matches proved conclusively that they can be used in other striking manners. He conceived the idea as a part time hobby, and for eight months worked diligently gluing matches over a dummy form—his only equipment being a razor blade and a glue pot. Ratte's accomplishment won him a prize in a radio contest, and, to prove that the violin really produces music, he played a selection on the air.

KNAPP LEADER AT OAKMONT

Larry W. Knapp, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, took the lead in the early-morning scores in the Pennsylvania State Golf Association's one-day tournament over the Oakmont Country Club course today. The Field Club man had a 42 on the outward nine and then shot a 40 coming in for an 82 to lead the field by a wide margin.

The slow drizzling rain and the murky sky made scoring a tough job, without the added attractions of mountainous sand traps and bunkers. The scores:

L. W. Knapp, Pittsburgh Field Club	42	40	82
J. W. Smith, Mahoning	46	38	84
R. McCune, Jr., Monessen Heights	44	41	85

Rocco and Solomen Both Knocked Out

CANTON, O., Sept. 16.—(INS.)—A lightning-like punch to the jaw today had cost Emmett Rocco, the Ellwood City, (Pa.) heavyweight mitt-pusher, another ring decision, this time in the second round.

The dispatcher of the victory blow and the winner of the scheduled 10-round main go was the pride of Ohio's famous rubber city, K. O. Christner, of Akron.

Rocco, 10 pounds lighter than his opponent, managed to make it an even and interesting scrap during the first period, but in the second he literally walked into one of Christner's rights, which sent him to the floor for a knockout.

CHAMP BEATEN IN TOURNEY

BULLETIN.

Mrs. J. Raymond Price, of Oakmont, and Mrs. S. I. Wendt, of the Field Club, were all even at the end of 18 holes.

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

The defending champion, Mrs. Frank E. Campbell, of Stanton Heights, eliminated by Antoinette Hunter, of Oakmont, 1928 titleholder, the ninth annual Women's Western Pennsylvania golf championship tourney, in progress at the Pittsburgh Field Club, moved into the penultimate round with a new titleholder certain to be crowned.

A third Oakmonter, Mrs. Sara Fownes Wadsworth, pioneer among district women golfers, also advanced to the round of four, and if Mrs. J. Raymond Price, fourth Hultonite, succeeds in taking over Mrs. C. I. Wendt, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, in the last of today's major contests, an all-Oakmont final is assured for Friday's deciding embroglio.

Mrs. Campbell was beaten 1 down, by Miss Hunter, meeting a wealth of hard luck on the home hole.

Miss Abernathy took the measure of Mary Kuhn, runner-up in the recent Pittsburgh Field Club championship, 3 and 1, in a battle of youngsters, and Mrs. Wadsworth eliminated a former home club champion, the second Field Club star to fall today, Mrs. J. Al Ellen, by a margin of 4 and 3.

Mrs. Campbell made a valiant attempt to keep her laurels. She was out in 41, one under women's par, and made the turn 1 up on Miss Hunter, who had recorded par 42. It was the sub-par golf of the Oakmont star on the last nine that told the tale.

The summary:

CHAMPIONSHIP SIXTEEN

CONSOLATIONS

Mrs. J. B. Rose, Allegheny, defeated Bessie Rosebrugh, Oakmont, 1 up.
Mrs. W. G. Briggs, Shannopin, defeated Mrs. W. H. Duff, Oakmont, 4 and 3.

SECOND SIXTEEN

Mrs. J. M. Irwin defeated Mrs. A. C. Rudolph, 1 up, 19 holes.
Mrs. H. C. Borghart defeated Mrs. G. O. Brown, 1 up, 19 holes.

CONSOLATIONS

Mrs. W. P. McReady defeated Mrs. J. H. Thorn, 1 up.
Mrs. Charles H. Lehman defeated Mrs. Theodore Rosenmeyer, 5 and 3.
Mrs. C. Lloyd defeated Mrs. J. H. Bigler, 3 and 2.
Mrs. Van Dyk Voorhees defeated Vinia Trautman, 4 and 3.

Says Nick Altrock

Baseball's Comedian

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—I see they're going to change the official golf ball from 1.55 to 1.62 inches. When you consider how much stew meat you can buy these days compared with 1929, it's about time the golf ball manufacturers gave more weight for the money than they have been.

Nick Altrock

Well, now that the U. S. G. A. has given us a 1.62 ounce ball instead of a 1.55, how about the anti-saloon league giving us 3.5 per cent beer and the country club bootleggers furnishing their stuff in full quarts instead of fifths.

Only 135,000 folks have applied for the 32,000 World Series seats in Shibe Park. If you want to see a sad sight, it's the Philadelphia management turning back most of that dough.

PITT GRIDDERS ARE RESTED

CAMP HAMILTON, WINDBER, Pa., Sept. 16.—Pitt's Panthers probably will be given a breathing spell today, after two days of strenuous scrimmage sessions. It is unlikely that Sutherland will run his charges through another scrimmage until Thursday, but the boys will be on the field for two drills during the day and will spend their time with passing, kicking, signals and work on the tackling dummy.

Yesterday saw the Panthers reverse their field and play heads-up football in contrast to the haphazard exhibition of the day previous. The varsity went through its paces as though it were enjoying every minute of the tussle with the third team, and finally went to the showers with a three-touchdown victory. Heller converted one of his tries for the extra point successfully, and the score for the day was varsity 11, and thirds with the total that all teams start out with.

The most pleasing performances of the scrimmage were given by the hard-running Paul Reider and Jim MacMurdo. Reider started at his halfback position, but after several minutes was allowed to call it quits for the day. Paul broke loose for two zig-zagging runs, each of which ended up behind the goal line.

PIRATES ONLY 2½ GAMES OUT OF MONEY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Our Pirates have a heavy date with Uncle Robbie this afternoon. The Ensmen and Robins are due to clash in their final battle of the season, but there is not as much punch in that angle of the scrap as there is in the opportunity that lies in front of the Buccos as regards fourth place, which position is now occupied by the Flatbush Flock.

In other words, the Freebooters have a chance to get at least a small piece of the World Series pie. Their delightful stands of yesterday afternoon, which brought them two triumphs over the Robins, reduced the gap separating the two clubs to two and one-half games. If they can cop today they will be right on the necks of the Flock, and Uncle Robbie must take his team into other hostile sectors after he departs. The Robins will flutter away to Chicago tonight, and from there they will hie themselves to St. Louis.

A CRUCIAL GAME

So today's game is deep with significance. It really has the value of two games, for in the event of a Brooklyn success, the Birds will be three and one-half games in front with the season nearing its closing week.

Manager Ens has Bill Harris and Remy Kremer ready for slab action today. The Texas League graduate has been so impressive in his two games with the Buccos he may draw the assignment. Only one run has been scored off the new sharpshooter in his 18 innings of action. Uncle Robbie may counter with Dolf Luque or Hollis Thurston.

The Braves will come to Pittsburgh tomorrow for their last series of the season. The set of games includes successive double bills, these being scheduled for tomorrow and Friday. The fifth and final battle will be staged Saturday.

EARLY START TOMORROW

The home management announced last night that the dual scraps with the Braves would begin at 1:45 p. m., instead of at 2 p. m., as has been the custom.

Heinie Meine and Larry French looked like two of the best sharpshooters in the game yesterday as they each landed a victory over the Robins. The scores were 5 to 2 and 2 to 1.

In justice to Dazzy Vance it should be written that Dazzy deserved some better than a defeat. Both of the runs scored on The Dazzler were tainted. Errors by Babe Herman and Glenn Wright

(This is the seventh of an annual series of special articles, written by Jess Carver, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph football writer, dealing with the prospects of tri-state college elevens. The article on Waynesburg, with photos of the Yellow Jackets in action in their training camp, will appear in tomorrow's issue.)

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 16.—Smiles of general satisfaction adorn the visages of Messrs. Bill Amos, Pete Henry and Woofty Wild, the football coaches here at old Wash-Jeff as they survey the gridiron prospects of the Presidents for the '31 season.

If things go as well as generally is expected, and the team clicks as it should, the dark days appear to be about over for W. & J., which means partial restoration of Wash-Jeff as a football power and a corresponding restoration of the school's athletic finances.

The coaching staff has an exceptionally promising outlay of material. Indeed, in my swing about the circuit to date, I have seen only one squad better off in point of man power than the Prexys, that being Pitt. Bulwarking 13 lettermen are a score of crackerjack sophomores and holdovers apparently strong enough to carry the Red and Black over its rugged 10-game schedule in shipshape fashion. Nine of the 10 games on the Presidential list will be played away from home.

WEALTH OF NEW TALENT

The extent of the sophomore strength is such that more than one former varsity performer faces the stiffest sort of a scrap before he can retain his position. Even big Stewart Wilson, the southpaw tossing and kicking fullback, may have to give up his post and be fitted elsewhere into the backfield, if at all.

Coaches Amos and Henry, the varsity mentors, have seven ends, five tackles, six guards, three centers, three quarterbacks, seven halfbacks and two fullbacks on the 33-man squad. Seven of the 13 lettermen are backs and six are linemen. It is the rush line veterans who are going to experience the greatest difficulty in holding their jobs.

Right now, the wing jobs are in the safe keeping of Ken McNeil, a veteran, and young Headley, a sophomore. McNeil's qualities have been proven to the satisfaction of all concerned in the past. Headley has shown the greatest promise of the youngsters. Looking on, ready to step in should either falter, are Johnston, a letterman last year; Updergraff, another letter winner; Miko, Bob Fife and Gardner, sophomores.

TWO BIG TACKLES

Rhodes and Melenyzer, both second year men, have the inside track for the tackle jobs. They lack experience, but possess the necessary class to win starting jobs. Melenyzer weighs 193 and Rhodes better than 200. Their weights are fine for the positions. Kelly, a letterman, Charley Armstrong, a second Pete Henry in size (he weighs 230) and Dalyrimple, an 187-pounder, will understudy Rhodes and Melenyzer, if they cinch the jobs.

George Demas, a guard last year, and John Fife, Wash-Jeff's leading all-America prospect, are working at the first string guard jobs. Demas will have to step unless he wants to be supplanted by the husky and peppery Bubenheim, former Carrick High, of Pittsburgh, star. Fife is a veritable wow, if you get what I mean. He may take Jap Douds' place as the big shot of the rush line.

LINE IS POWERFUL

So much for the line. It's not too heavy and will have enough experience to balance the sophomore cogs. It should be a potent force.

I mentioned before that Stewie Wilson might have difficulty in holding his fullback post. The crack still goes. This fellow Bob Deacle, who transferred from Westminster last year, has shown surprising line wrecking qualities and is going to be a hard man to keep out of the first backfield. The result is that Wilson, who is almost invaluable as a passer and a kicker, looks to be slated for the quarterback role, placing Johnny Butler on the bench.

Then, Kaiser, another fullbacker by trade, is booting 'em so well and toting the ball with such telling effect, that he has won himself a halfback job. He'll be paired, likely, with the speed merchant of the club, the elusive Armstrong.

Port, Shaffer, Butler and Zagray, another speed boy and an accurate passer, Rosso, Cook, Demedowitz and Romito, a dynamic atom, built somewhat on the order of Albie Booth, of Yale, provide the very best of reserve material. Zagray, particularly, will be difficult to keep perched on the bench. He'll see plenty of service spelling little Armstrong.

PUNTERS CAPABLE

With Wilson and Kaiser to handle the kicking, Wash-Jeff need fear little and her opponents much as far as that department of the game is concerned. The pair of 'em can just about outboot any kicker in the section, unless it be Cliff Battles, of West Virginia Wesleyan.

The Presidents, incidentally, will clash with the formidable Battles in the first game of the year, and the only home game on the card. Battles and his supporting cast of Bobcats from West Virginia Wesleyan will furnish the Red and Black with a torrid inaugural match.

The week following, the local eleven will appear in Pittsburgh, stacking up against Tech. On October 10, they'll take on Marshall at Huntington. Then they appear against Western Maryland, Lafayette, Temple, Marquette, Bucknell, Western Reserve and West Virginia in a row. A right sizeable job.

It will pay you to keep a weather eye open for this eleven, for it plays a representative schedule and may wind up among the unbeaten teams of the East. The big games are with Tech, Temple, Marquette and West Virginia. They fear Temple, and with reason.

LAYDEN PREPS FOR FRIDAY'S OPENER

Football affairs will move swiftly on the Bluff today as the Night Riders of Duquesne University complete preparations for the local season opener with Geneva College under the Forbes Field lights Friday night. Today's program calls for early drills on the field, signal and formation practices, skull drill after lunch and more heavy work after the usual rest period. The Bluff training work will end earlier than usual today, so that the men may be ready for their first workout under the lights tonight.

Layden will have opportunity for only a short night drill, but it will give the Night Riders an opportunity to test their abilities under the new battery of 50 floodlights which will light the nocturnal encounters this season.

NEW MARKING METHOD

Coach Layden believes the new method of marking the field for the first game, that of employing white glass sand, will be highly successful. Tests have already indicated that this would be so.

Declining to give any definite word as to his lineup for Friday, Coach Layden will run three different combinations through final signal practice today. If the Duke coach decides to use his pony backfield of last season, spectators will find Bud DeVinney calling the signals, Ben Pawlina at fullback and Fred Cristina and Val Trambley at the halves. With Joe Sepsi, Al DeLuca, George Chacko and other ball carriers to call on, however, it is impossible to state what the Duke coach will pull out of the bag in the way of surprises. A large attendance is indicated by the sale of tickets to date.

SHIFTS AT TECH

Drastic changes are planned in the lineups of the first and second Carnegie Tech teams, and they are to be made today, according to Head Coach Steffen, who is still considerably disturbed because of the weak showing of his varsity in its big scrimmage on Monday afternoon. There was no sham battle yesterday, and will there be today. The judge will make his readjustments in today's sessions, and probably send the revamped outfits into action again tomorrow.

One of the most scorching lectures that has ever been delivered at Tartan Bowl was the piece-de-resistance of yesterday morning's drill. Steffen minced no words in telling his charges of their shortcomings, and the most glaring faults were paraded before the entire squad to the chagrin of those who had committed them.

Abt Scores Ace At Castle Shannon

Johnny Abt, former manager of the Stanton Heights and South Hills country clubs, joined the mythical Hole-in-One-Club yesterday when he tallied an ace on the 200-yard, No. 4 hole at the Castle Shannon Golf Club, while playing as a guest in the Lions Club tourney there. Charles K. Schmidt, W. A. Tavano and J. H. Wallace saw him turn the unusual trick.

U. S. RIDERS COP

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Stephen (Laddie) Sanford, No. 1 man scored 11 goals yesterday as his Anglo-American Hurricanes continued their defense of the United States open polo championship by slaughtering Lewis Larry's Argentine four, representing the Hurlingham Club, of Buenos Aires. The final score was 18 to 5, and put the Hurricanes in the final round.

PIE STAYS AT POST

Pie Traynor's spirit had a lot to do with the double success. The Pirate captain was supposed to rest with his spiked left foot, but he insisted in staying at his post. His bat won the opening encounter and Pie's steadying influence was a great help to French in the second fight.

Woody Jensen and Tony Piet shared honors with the other stars of the day. Jensen clicked a homer to left center in the first game while Pie's batting and baserunning throughout the afternoon were bright features.

Fairmont Players Get Notes for Pay

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Sept. 16—The Mad Atlantic" League players of Fairmont are mad. The club at the end of the season owed them 28 days pay. Yesterday each player got $15 and a 60-day note signed by President Fred L. Doringer for the remainder of the back pay. The notes are negotiable—the notes say so. There is hope that arrangements may be made to meet the notes in 60 days.

STOCK MARKET QUIET, PRICES FLUCTUATE

Westinghouse Rushes Up 4 Points as Dividend Is Cut Less Than Expected

The market was supported on declines, but ran into fresh selling on advances. The list pushed up with some vigor after initial but application selling. It opened with a moderate sag, rallied during the morning and sold off again before noon.

Westinghouse Electric, in mid-a loss of more than a point, in a gain of more than 3 as reduction of the quarterly dividend from 75 to 62½ cents was less drastic than expected in some quarters. United States Steel, distributed shares, Pittsburgh and West Virginia sold at 18 off 12.

The mid-week business statistics provided a little encouragement, particularly the steel trade returns. Steel ingot output is variously estimated this week at between 30 and 32 per cent of capacity, as against 28 to 30 a week previous. The Youngstown area is said still to be holding its output at 41 per cent, maintaining the rate of the beginning of the week, although some tapering off frequently occurs as the week wears on. Orders and inquiries for railroad rails, structural steel, and line pipe are described as encouraging. The automobile industry remains rather hesitant.

Foreign developments, notably some recovery in the Berlin Bourse, were not impressive, but in the main seemed more favorable than otherwise.

The weekly freight car loadings report for the week ended September 5 showing a sag of about 4,000 cars from the previous week was not quite with expectations as the week before a holiday usually sees some shrinkage. The electric power consumption report for the first two weeks of the month shows a loss of about 4 per cent, compared to nearly the least favorable comparison since last spring, but is possibly attributable to the fact that the Labor Day holiday was more widely recognized in many industries as steel this year.

Rustless Selling Foreign Patents

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (AP.) — The International Rustless Iron Corporation has disposed of its foreign patents exclusive of Canada and Mexico to a European group it was announced today. It was effected through an exchange for securities representing 1,000,000 shares of the corporation's common stock.

Associated with the purchasing group are A. H. and Renald Wild. The former was president of the International Company, parent company of the Rustless Iron Corporation. They have resigned as executives of the International Company and from the boards of both the parent and subsidiary companies.

CHICAGO STOCKS

Business Gaining In Scattered Districts

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (AP.) — Some improvement in business conditions in 10 large cities and virtually no change in others was reported today in the Department of Commerce weekly business survey.

Philadelphia manufacturers reported a distinct improvement for August over July. For the first time in months working hours and payrolls were greater. Retail sales increased, while improvement was shown in the leather, printing and building material lines.

Besides Philadelphia, the most complete reports were received from Boston, Buffalo, Wilmington, Norfolk, Charlotte, Memphis, Louisville, Birmingham, Minneapolis and Chicago.

STEEL OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 — The Iron Age, in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade tomorrow will say:

Inquiries for 111,000 tons of rails, awards of 54,000 tons of line pipe, increasing activity in structural steel and concrete bars and growing interest among automobile makers in their forward requirements are prominent developments in the iron and steel market.

The rail inquiries indicate that the annual rail buying movement will soon get under way.

The outlook in fabricated steel construction is good for the remainder of the year in view of the large amount of public work that is coming to a head, and prospects for a revival of private building in 1932 are stated to be more definite recently.

Pending the launching of production on the new models late in the year by the principal automobile manufacturers, no new expected.

Steel ingot production is unchanged at 30 per cent of capacity, but an increase is looked for in the coming week.

EARLY COTTON GAIN LOST

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 — Cotton opened steady at a net advance of 6 to 9 points on trade buying and covering influenced by relatively firm Liverpool cables. December sold up to 6.93c and March to 7.22c on the initial demand, but later the demand tapered off and December sold down to 6.84c with the market showing net losses of about 3 to 4 points.

The weekly report of the Weather Bureau was generally characterized as very favorable and brought in a little selling. This appeared to be quite readily absorbed, however, and the market later in the morning was quiet and steady with prices at midday holding around 6.87c for December, or about net unchanged to 2 points lower.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 16 — Cotton — Fine good business done; prices 9 points higher. American strict good middling 4.59; good middling 4.24; strict middling 4.04; middling 3.89; strict low middling 3.74; low middling 3.54; strict good ordinary 3.34; good ordinary 3.04. Sales 6,000 bales, including 2,900 American. Receipts 1,000 American. Total futures closed quiet and steady. October 3.62; December 3.66; January 3.68; March 3.76; May 3.84; July 3.90.

WESTINGHOUSE ON $2.50 BASIS

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company declared dividends of 62½ cents on both the common and preferred stocks, payable October 31 to record of September 30.

Previously the common had received two quarterly dividends of $1 each, prior to which the stock was on a $5 annual basis.

Payment of these dividends will make a total of 7½ per cent paid this year on a par of $50 of both classes of stock, which compares with 10 per cent in 1930.

The preferred, which is $50 par, is entitled to dividends at the rate of 5 per cent before any payments are made on the common. After the common receives the equivalent of 5 per cent both stocks share equally in further payments.

President Robertson stated:

"In view of the reduced earnings of the company this year it is not thought advisable to pay more than this rate of dividend at this time."

A'S CLINCH FLAG

CARDS NEED ONE WIN IN NATIONAL

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16 (AP).—There was no celebration of special thrill for the Philadelphia fans when news the Athletics, under the leadership of Connie Mack, had won their ninth American League pennant, reached here. It was a foregone conclusion, but still satisfaction was expressed at the performance of the world champions.

Connie Mack, who will be 69 years old in December, heard the news just after he entered his home from Shibe Park.

MACK PLEASED

"That's fine," he exclaimed. "I am rather pleased, of course, that our boys have again won the pennant. It did not come with that thrill as it would have had we had a hard fight right down to the wire. We have had a good lead right along and some of the thrill was taken out of it.

"Now, we will get ready for the World's Series. It is going to be a good battle."

CARDS NEED GAME

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 16 (AP).—Big Jim Lindsay abandoned his role of relief pitcher today and shut out Philadelphia, 5 to 0, the fifth straight game the Cardinals have taken from the Quakers and making only one more win necessary for the National League champions to clinch another pennant. If the Giants had not been prevented from playing by rain and had lost, it would have meant victory for the Red Birds would have clinched the flag. As it is, another game is neccessary. The Cardinals play the Phillies again today.

Forbes

U. S. Senator Welcomed As Buyer of Stock

—By B. C. FORBES—

A UNITED STATES senator has purchased a modest number of shares in a large business corporation. And thereby hangs an interesting thought-provoking tale.

POLITICIANS are fond of thundering that business men are so engrossed in their own moneymaking that they shockingly neglect their civic duties and are woefully ignorant of and indifferent to public affairs.

B. C. Forbes

Business men complain equally emphatically that politicians make no serious attempt to gain understanding of industrial and other economic problems, and that, consequently, harmful legislation is constantly proposed and not infrequently enacted. American industrialists contrast political hostility to industry here with the close co-operation which was always exercised between government and industry in Britain, France, Germany, etc.—at least until, in the case of Britain, very recently.

The pointed comment was made at the time Theodore Roosevelt was swinging his big stick, "in Britain men of affairs who exhibit extraordinary enterprise and accomplish outstanding things are knighted, here they are indicted."

IT SO HAPPENS that the head of the company whose shares the United States Senator has purchased, takes very keen personal interest in welcoming new buyers of the stock. So, when he spotted the Senator's name, he sent him this letter of welcome:

"I know of no more constructive thing than for gentlemen holding high office to establish industrial connections which, if carried far enough, will undoubtedly lead to better understanding of the mutual problems of legislation and industry. I shall be personally appreciative of any suggestions or criticisms you feel disposed to make with regard to the conduct of this business at any time. We feel that we occupy the same relation towards our stockholders as you do towards your constituents—that of a great public trust."

The writer of that letter is Colby M. Chester, Jr., president of General Foods Corporation. He has an eye to business in writing every new stockholder, as you will see from these sentences from the letter he customarily sends:

"It is a pleasure to welcome you as part owner of this corporation through your purchase of capital stock.

"In the conduct of its business the management is conscious of its responsibility to the stockholders, and therefore is desirous of keeping you informed concerning company affairs. The enclosed booklet will better acquaint you with our principal advertised brands.

"We also wish to impress on you the material contribution you can make to the company's continued success.

"General Foods products are already used in nearly every American home. Sales can be increased, however, by the stockholders, through patronage of our products and by 'word of mouth' advertising among friends."

THERE NEVER WAS a time when there was greater need than today for sympathetic understanding between government and industry, and for close, friendly, constructive co-operation to restore public confidence in American business enterprises and their securities, now owned by approximately two of every three families in the land.

HERRERA TO BOX GOODMAN HERE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Tony Herrera, of Chicago and Joey Goodman, of Cleveland, will box the main bout of the opening show of the indoor mitt season at Motor Square Garden one week from next Monday night.

This match, a "natural" here, in view of the successes of the lightweight rivals in bouts in this sector, has been more than a year in the making and was closed by Jules Beck, who switches over from the Meyers Bowl to the Garden as matchmaker again with the ending of the outdoor campaign.

Incidentally, Beck has finished his season's work at the Bowl. His Tiger Joe West-Paul Pironne show carded for tonight has been set back to next Monday, which means that it will serve to ring down the curtain on the season at the North Braddock arena. Pironne was reported to have picked up a cold which interfered with his training and caused him to ask for a delay of several days in the bout. The entire card will stand as arranged. Billy Holt boxes Ray Lyle in the semi-final.

BREAK FOR MILLVALE

With the Bowl show deferred, Hickey Park, Millvale, finds itself in complete possession of the week's fistic stage locally, and should do right well by itself with its Andy Martin-Frankie Bojarski show tomorrow night. The undefeated Bojarski and the very adept Martin make up an intriguing combination, with two possibilities—one that Bojarski will prove too rugged and will knock out his man, and the other that Martin will be too clever for Bojarski and will outscore him handily. The pair were matched once before, for Erie, but the battle did not materialize on that occasion.

Sport Vignettes

Connie Mack doesn't know whether to start Rube Walberg, Roy Mahaffey or Eddie Rommel in the opening game of the world series against the Cardinals . . . If he should lose this one, he'll have only Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw to fall back on . . . The Belmont Futurity, with a possible value of $125,000, making it the richest race in the world, will be run at Belmont Park next Saturday . . . It is a dash of 6¾ furlongs for juveniles . . . As a companion feature, the Jockey Club Gold Cup race is scheduled, which may see another battle between Twenty Grand and Sun Beau . . . Mate, twice victor over Twenty Grand, is a doubtful starter.

They're touting Gus Dorais' University of Detroit Titans as one of the best elevens of the year. . . Coach Burt Ingwersen, of Iowa, has no early-season worries aside from a game with the Pitt Panthers on October 3. . . In addition to Detroit, Northwestern, Purdue, which meets Carnegie Tech here, and Michigan, hope to steal the thunder from the Rockneiss Notre Dame Irish this year. . . Northwestern will be defending its Western Conference title, and Purdue was the champion year before last. . . The new golf ball settles a weighty problem . . . And the National League will suffer some heavy losses if Hack Wilson and Wilbert Robinson are permitted to pass out.

There's just as much interest in the duel of wits between Coaches Elmer Layden and Howard Harpster as there is in the opening battle between their teams at Forbes Field Friday night . . . Geneva won last year's tilt at Beaver Falls, 7-0 . . . The Grand Circuit is in for a big week at Lexington, Ky., beginning September 21, when the 2 and 3-year-old futurities in both the trotting and pacing classes will be decided, along with the Walnut Hall Cup and the Transylvania stakes for trotters and the Hollyrood for pacers . . . Perhaps you didn't know it, but many of the larger universities and colleges are high-hatting those that play night football games and won't put them on their schedules . . . Meaning what?

Washington University, of St. Louis, is playing the first six of its nine games on Saturday nights . . . And St. Louis University has six Friday night games and one on Saturday night out of its card of nine battles . . . A reader, Jean McGovern, suggests a series of interleague games between the stars of the two major leagues not involved in the world series, a game to be played in each city represented, for the benefit of the unemployed . . . Not a bad suggestion if the plan could be worked out at this late stage, with the football season already upon us.—HARRY KECK.

N. B. A. RANKS PRIMO NO. 13

DETROIT, Sept. 16 (AP).—The championship committee of the National Boxing Association, in its annual report to the association's annual convention, revised the rankings of boxers in several classes and dropped Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight, from fifth position in the last quarterly ranking to number 13.

General John V. Clinnin, of Chicago, was re-elected president of the National Boxing Association at the organization's closing session today. James M. "Bingo" Brown, of Ypsilanti, Mich., was re-elected first vice-president.

Between Rounds

Matt Adgie and Al Ettore box in Philadelphia tonight, the bout having been rescheduled from Monday due to bad weather. Bernie Reynolds and Johnny Irish meet in other bouts at Newark, N. J., tonight.

Benny Goldblatt, of the Hill, returns on Sunday to his home in Chicago for a visit of four or five weeks while he waits on his broken right hand to mend. Benny has done some good fighting since crossing arranged horns with Angelo Vergona, L. A. carpenter, and Andy Andrews, and will be welcomed upon his return.

Bill Shmeidinger has Eddie Hanger in prime condition for his right-hand jamboree at Hickey Park tomorrow night with Bad Boy McArthur the main bait. Has Dick Artis, the Uniontown amateur star, all signed up and ready to turn professional.

The writing back of the West Pitcher bout at the Bowl to next Monday night knocks out George Parks's appearance there that night against either Bernardo Bertoncini or Roberto Roberti, for which he had been signed, according to his manager, Benny Bastarch.

Central Soccer Loop Adds Two Members

The Pittsburgh Central League was increased to eight clubs at a special meeting of the managers at the Leslie Park Recreation rooms last evening. The managers voted to admit McKeesport National Tube and the Westinghouse Club.

The loop is composed of Union Switch, Pittsburgh Rovers, Pittsburgh Celtics, Crafton, National Tube, Westinghouse, Clan Douglas and the German Sport Club. The openers scheduled Saturday, September 26, follow: Clan Douglas at Crafton, Westinghouse at National Tube, German Sport Club at Union Switch and the Pittsburgh Celtics at Pittsburgh Rovers.

TITLE GO SET

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (The): A lightweight championship match between Tony Canzoneri, titleholder and Billy Petrolle, of Fargo, N. D., appeared to be virtually closed. Jack Hurley, Petrolle's manager, said he talked to Nate Lewis, matchmaker of the Chicago Stadium, over long distance telephone in Chicago, and accepted the match, scheduled to be held in the Chicago Stadium on October 16.

GLENNA WINS TOURNEY

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16 (AP).—Shaving three strokes off the women's par of 78, Mrs. Edwin H. Vare, Jr., the former Glenna Collett, national champion, won the Mary Thayer Farnum Memorial golf championship at Gulph Mills. Mrs. Vare finished the 36-hole tournament with a total of 154 strokes.

COACH GRID CASUALTY

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 16 (AP).—The first casualty in the Syracuse University football ranks is Vic Hanson, the boss coach. Vic received a painful ear injury as he collided with a substitute back. Hanson returned to the field immediately after being patched up.

EDGEWOOD NINE ELIMINATED

CLEVELAND, Sept. 16.—The Pittsburgh Edgewoods were unsuccessful in their effort to capture the National Baseball Federation tournament championship. They were eliminated yesterday by Fort Wayne, 9 to 6, after they practically had the game sewed up.

Holding a 4-2 advantage at the end of the sixth inning, Barnum suddenly became ineffective and the Hoosiers connected with his deliveries for three runs and four hits before the side was retired. Edgewood came back in their half of the inning with a pair of markers to again take the lead, but Fort Wayne won the game in the eighth with a four-run rally in which they mauled Bolyard and his successor, Laughlin, for as many safe blows.

Company's Surviving Soldiers Prepare to Disband

CHAPTER VI.

Listlessly we trudge onward. We had pictured our entry into our own country after the long years out there rather differently from this. We imagined that people would be waiting for us, expecting us; now we see that already everyone is taken up with his own affairs. Life has moved on, is still moving on; it is leaving us behind almost as if we were superfluous already. This village, of course, is not Germany; all the same, the disappointment hurts and a shadow passes over us and a queer foreboding.

Carts rattle past; drivers shout; men look up as they pass, then fall again to their own thoughts and cares. The hour is pealing from the church tower; the damp wind sniffs us as it goes by. Only an old woman with long bonnet strings is running indefatigably along the column and in a tremulous voice is asking for a certain Erhard Schmidt.

We are billeted in a large outhouse. Though we have marched a long way no one wants to rest. We go off to the inn.

Here is life in plenty and a turbid wine of this year's vintage. It tastes wonderful and it works powerfully in the legs, so we are the more content to sit. Clouds of tobacco smoke drift through the low room; the wine smells of the earth and of summer; we fetch out our tins of preserved meat, carve off great slices and lay them on thick slabs of buttered bread; stick our knives upright beside us in the big wooden table and eat. The oil lamp beams down upon us all like a mother.

Synopsis

Ernst, a schoolboy when he enlisted, is telling the story of a handful of German soldiers who have survived the years of trench warfare. Peace has been declared. The men are marching homeward. On the way they meet a column of American troops and the soldiers fraternize, trading souvenirs, food, tobacco. Later, as they halt at a brewery and make camp, the news of the revolution at Berlin reaches them. The company commander, Lieut. Heel, rips off his shoulder straps and in the night is seen crying, his head buried in his hands. Marching again, they enter Germany, but children are frightened by the scarecrow troops. The men sensing an alien Fatherland, are puzzled and disheartened.

Now Go On

GIRLS FRIENDLIER

Night makes the world beautiful. Not in frontline trenches, of course, but in peace. This afternoon we marched in here dejected; now we begin to revive. The little band playing in the corner soon gets reinforcement from our fellows. We can supply not merely pianists and virtuosos with the mouth organ—there is even a Bavarian with a zither. Willy Homeyer will not be out of it. He has rigged himself up a sort of devil's fiddle and with the aid of a couple of enormous pot lids is treating us to the combined glory and clash of cymbals, kettledrums and rattle.

But the unusual thing that goes to our heads even more than the wine, is the girls. They are quite other than they were a year ago. 'Tis afternoon; they smile and are complaisant. Or are these different ones perhaps? It is so long now since we have seen any girls.

At first we are both eager and shy at the same time; we are not quite sure of ourselves; we seem to have forgotten how to get along with them. At last Ferdinand Kosole waltzes off with one, a husky wench. Now all the others are following his lead.

The heavy, sweet wine sings pleasantly in the head, the girls are whirling by and the music plays. We are sitting in a group in one corner gathered about Adolf Bethke. "Well, boys," says he, tomorrow or next day we'll be home again. Yes, my wife—10 months it is now—

I lean across the table and speak to Valentin Laher, who is looking the girls over coolly, with a superior air. There is a blonde sitting beside him but he is paying her little attention. As I lean forward something in my tunic pocket presses against the edge of the table. I feel to find out what it is. Wessling's watch.

WILLY PREPARES MEAL

Jupp has hooked the fattest dame. He is dancing like a question mark. His paw lies flat upon her spacious back. She is smiling up into his face, and he is growing merrier every minute. Finally he waltzes out through the door into the yard and vanishes.

A few minutes later I go out.

I nod. We gaze awhile into the moon.

We take a turn around the house and discover Willy Homeyer. He has lit a great fire of weeds in a field and thrown on a few handfuls of stolen potatoes. Now there he sits alone before it, peacefully dreaming, waiting till the potatoes are baked. Near by are laid out a few tins of American cutlets, and the dog is squatting watchfully beside him.

The flickering of the fire throws copper gleams through his red hair. Mists are gathering from the meadows. The stars twinkle. We sit down beside him and fish our potatoes from the fire. The skins are burned black, but the inside is golden yellow and fragrant. We grasp the cutlets in both hands and saw away at them as if they were mouth organs. And we wash them down with schnapps out of our aluminum cups.

Potatoes! How good they taste! And where are we exactly? Has the earth re-turned on her tracks? Are we children again, sitting in the field near Totloxten? Haven't we been digging potatoes all day in the strong smelling earth and behind us with baskets, red-cheeked girls in faded blue dresses? And now the potato fire! White mists trailing over the field, the fire crackling and the rest are still. The potatoes, they were the last fruit. Now all is gathered in—now only the earth, the clean air, the loved, bitter, white smoke, the end of the harvest. Bitter smoke, bitter smell of the harvest potato fire of our childhood. Wraiths of mist drift up, draw together and withdraw—faces of comrades. We are marching; the war is ended—all is melting, dissolving away—potato fires have come to their own again, and the harvest and life.

PEACEFUL QUIET

"Ah, Willy! Willy! My boy!"

Ach, fathead, I was meaning something far different.

The fire has burned out. Willy wipes his hands on his breeches and shuts his knife with a snap. A few dogs are barking in the village—otherwise all is quiet. No more shells. No clatter of munition columns. No more the wary scrunching of ambulance cars. A night in which far fewer men will die than ever in the last four years.

We go back into the inn. But there is not much doing now. Valentin has taken off his tunic and stands up on his hands a few times. The girls applaud, but Valentin is dissatisfied. I was a good artist once, Ferdinand. But that won't do, not even for the village fairs," he says gloomily to Kosole. "Gone stiff in the joints, I have. Valentin's famous turn on the horizontal bar—that was a thing to gaze on, I can tell you. And now I've got rheumatics."

Homeyer sets to work with a will on kettledrum and rattles. Things begin to be lively again.

Ludwig Breyer is seated at the table, pale and still. He ought to have been asleep long ago, but he does not want to go. His arm is healing well and the dysentery has improved slightly. But he remains turned in upon himself and troubled.

I sit down beside him. "Aren't you glad to be going home?" I ask him.

He gets up and goes away. I cannot make him out. Later I discover him outside, standing alone. I question him no more. We go inside again in silence.

Wine is running over the table, the lamp is smoking, and the girls' spirits are high. A warm, damp weariness drifts lightly at the back of my brow; everything has soft, blurred edges, like star shells seen through fog; my head sinks slowly down upon the table. Then the night roars on, smoothly and wonderful, like an express train, across the country. Soon we are at home.

WOEFUL MEMORIES

For the last time we stand drawn up in the barracks square. Part of the company lives here in the neighborhood and they are being disbanded. The rest of us must make our own way, for the railway services are so irregular that we cannot be transported farther in a body. Now we must separate.

The wide, gray square is much too big for us. Across it sweeps a bleak November wind, smelling of decay and death. We are lined up between the canteen and the guardroom, more space we do not require. The wide, empty square about us wakes woeful memories. There, rank on rank, invisible, stand the dead.

Heel passes down the company. And behind him soundlessly walks the ghostly train of his predecessors. Nearest to him, with sorrowful eyes, goes Bertinck, company commander for a year and a half, a teacher, married, four children, beside him Moller, 19 years of age, gas-poisoned three days after he took command; and next, Redecker, forestry surveyor, two weeks later blashed into the earth by a direct hit; then still paler, more remote, Buttner, captain, killed in a raid with a machine gun bullet through the heart; and like shadows behind them, already almost without name, so far back, the others—seven company commanders in two years. And more than 500 men. Thirty-two are now standing in the barracks square.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Couple Rewed After Being Divorced a Year

Kidnaped?

"He's back," Mrs. Jardin said, with great emphasis on the pronoun.

Maj. Jardin paused at the top of the veranda steps and stared at his wife.

"Of course that's who I mean. I'm worried."

"Does Inez know?"

"Of course not. The poor dear has had enough troubles and worries without adding this."

"Oh, well; he has some financial interests in the vicinity. He probably won't stay long. Chances are that Inez won't meet him."

"Financial interests?" Mrs. Jardin fairly snorted as she spoke. "Financial interests, indeed—all he ever did was to waste money."

"At any rate," Maj. Jardin said, trying to comfort his wife, "he wouldn't call here. I doubt if he would dare even speak to Inez if he saw her. He got his orders when we sent him away."

"Well, I got it from Mrs. Stetson that he said," Mrs. Jardin lowered her voice and looked around, lest someone overhear her, "she said that she heard, with her own ears, Hal Vanderson say that all hell wouldn't keep him from having Inez back when he got ready to take her."

"I wouldn't worry," the major said, soothingly.

"Tush!"

"He might. I wouldn't put it past him. I was against the—" Mrs. Jardin caught a glimpse of Inez Vanderson coming across the lower lawn from the tennis courts. Instantly she leaned back in her chair, modulated her voice and began talking to her husband about the new gardener's marvelous success with the roses.

GIVES ADVICE

"We won three sets when I played with Tom," she cried, "but when I had to take Oliver on we lost—he's a sad flop in everything."

"My dear, how absurd because he doesn't happen to care for tennis. Think who he is—his social position and his old family and his millions!"

Inez ran on into the house and Mrs. Jardin sighed.

"My dear," the major cautioned, "suppose you drop this scheme of yours to marry Inez off to young Adamson. The more you praise him the more she will dislike him. When Inez gets quite ready and meets the right man, she will marry again. Just because she had one failure at matrimony doesn't mean that she must sit in a corner the rest of her days, or that she must marry the first nincompoop you happen to think of as a possible husband."

"Oliver is a splendid young man and if Inez would only marry him then we wouldn't worry about Vanderson any more."

"But there's nothing to worry about. Vanderson and Inez are quite properly and legally divorced. He knows better than to come snooping around here—"

"But he is. He's here—and he threatened to get her back and I'm sure he came here just for that purpose."

STOPS ARGUING

Argument was useless as he had learned years ago.

It was true that Hal Vanderson had returned to Westport. The Jardin country place was three miles from the village and, as Major Jardin had said, Vanderson did have some financial interests there, in a factory and some land company and the like.

Inez Stedman had lived with her aunt, Mrs. Jardin, for more than ten years, since being left an orphan. Three years ago she had met Hal Vanderson and they seemed to have fallen deeply in love. Two years ago they had eloped.

Mrs. Jardin made a terrible fuss about it. And, for that matter, so did Hal's mother.

The runaway match was considered by both sides of the families to have been a silly, almost childish affair. Mrs. Jardin took every occasion to complain about Hal. Mrs. Vanderson took every occasion to complain about Inez.

For a year they struggled along, happy today and miserable the next because of relatives who refused to believe that it was a good match.

It finally got so that Inez complained to her young husband that his mother and his two sisters were utterly unfair and impossible and that she did not care to see them again.

Hal secured a little home, then, and took Inez there. And then he was forced to complain to Inez that her aunt, Mrs. Jardin, was nosey and insulting and he hoped she would not come in their house again.

But Mrs. Vanderson dropped in almost every day at the cosy little home Hal had secured. She commented sharply on the place, the furnishings, the way the house was kept and so on and on. She even poked into the refrigerator and examined the food.

Mrs. Jardin would come over and complain bitterly that Inez did not have a nice big twelve-cylinder car and chauffeur, that she didn't have anything fit to wear, and so on and on.

Inez would try to make apologies for her aunt and Hal would try to make apologies for his mother and sisters.

LEAVES WESTPORT

The result was, that in time, it seemed to each one that the other wasn't offering apologies for buttinski relatives but attacking the relatives of the other.

They decided, without knowing how to figure out the real basic trouble and overcome it, that they weren't suited to each other.

Mrs. Jardin, in great triumph, bore her tearful little niece to Paris and when she returned Inez was without a husband.

The Vandersons were equally happy over it. It all went to prove what they had maintained right along, they said.

Maj. Jardin objected to some of the talk Hal Vanderson was quoted as uttering and had quite a run-in with him. Hal went away from Westport.

Hal's mother became bitter. She said, openly, that Inez had ruined poor Hal's life, driven him away from his home and his family.

Hal had made his boasts, as correctly quoted by old Mrs. Stetson, that all hell wouldn't prevent him from having Inez back when he got good and ready for her.

And so Mrs. Jardin was greatly worried.

Inez changed from her tennis togs this afternoon, had a plunge in the swimming pool, took much time to dress and drove away to the Parmenter place for dinner.

"It will be awful if she runs into him," Mrs. Jardin told her husband, the "him" meaning Hal Vanderson.

Next morning at breakfast Inez said, quite cheerfully, "Oh, I heard that Hal was back."

Her aunt glanced at her husband and he knew that she wanted him to say the diplomatic thing, so he said, "He has financial interests here—he won't remain long."

"Did Hal tell you? Have you seen him?"

"Of course the major hasn't seen him, and you should refer to him as Mr. Vanderson now," Mrs. Jardin answered for her husband. "Of course," she went on, "you won't speak to him if he should accost you."

Two weeks of anxiety followed. Then Inez, who had driven down to the village to bring back her friend, Polly Emerson, for dinner, did not return. A telephone message brought the information from Polly that she had not seen Inez, and the little car Inez owned was still parked in front of the village postoffice.

Higson, Westport's "day force" of police, recalled that he had seen Hal Vanderson about 5 o'clock that afternoon, but he had not seen Inez.

He did so. Two weeks passed. The story got out that Inez was missing. Mrs. Jardin's statement that she had merely gone on a visit wasn't believed.

Then Tom Mason, a neighbor of the Jardins and long-time friend of Inez, came to the Major and told him that, driving through from away up State, he was sure he saw Inez fishing in a stream. He had been away and heard nothing of her disappearance and thought nothing of it at the time. There were several big and expensive Summer lodges up in this district.

"There's a good trout stream, it might have been the place where Tom saw her," the Major said. They turned in a narrow road where, fifty yards ahead around a sharp turn, was a lake and an immense lodge.

Two people were sitting on the landing at the lake, fishing. A man and a boy, it seemed, but the boy proved to be Inez in blue overalls. Her companion was Hal Vanderson.

AUNT APOLOGIZES

"Oh, do be sensible, Aunty," Inez called out. "I'm on my second honeymoon. Hal and I were married again two weeks ago and we're going to stay married this time. Hal's people have apologized, they admit they were wrong and that Hal and I would have been all right if they, and you, had let us alone."

"Let's shake hands," Hal said.

Everyone shook hands, except Mrs. Jardin.

"If you loved him, it would be different, but to kidnap you—"

"Go back home, Auntie and in my room you turn my framed picture of you right around and look at it," Inez said.

The Jardins went back home. Mrs. Jardin turned her picture around as ordered. On the other side was a photograph of Hal Vanderson and written on it by Inez:

"The only man I'll ever love."

Mrs. Jardin sent a sweet letter, half apology and half congratulation, to Inez and Hal.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION

As a protest against the mad pace of modern civilization this group of young people has devised a method of outwitting cab drivers. "With a running start, the little lady finds it easier to enter this form of conveyance than to open and close the door of the old-fashioned taxi, which we are confident will be replaced by our system of locomotion," says one of the inventors. Prevent Its Recurrence

The Disgraceful Cheating That Marked the Election Must Not Be Allowed to Continue.

Thanks are due the Registration Commission, the elections committee of the Bar Association and the state troopers for their valiant efforts to assure an honest election.

For the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes, which permitted the enrollment of thousands of "phantoms," there can be nothing but scorn.

Someone is to blame for the breakdown of many of the voting machines. The charge that the machines had been tampered with raises the question why they were not properly guarded.

For the repeaters, the forgers of orders for the payment of poll taxes, the dishonest assessors, the forgers of tax receipts, and those who paid all these for their crookedness there should be prison sentences.

District Attorney Park publicly pledged himself on Monday to "take the initiative in securing and presenting to a grand jury any and all evidence concerning election frauds or attempts to commit election frauds."

He ought to have that pledge printed in large letters and placed on his desk, so that he cannot forget it. Prosecution of the election crooks is his highest duty, and he ought to start it at once while the evidence is fresh and the witnesses are available.

Our experience with this election indicates the need of some changes in the procedure. It is too easy to cheat under the present system.

The Duquesne Greys

Pittsburgh's Famous Regiment, Now Celebrating Its Centenary, Has a Glorious Record.

The excitement of the primary campaign has kept an important centennial observation from receiving the attention it deserved. But it is still not too late to pay homage to the Duquesne Greys, who recently passed their one hundredth birthday and are to hold commemorative exercises next Sunday, with Col. Edward L. Kearns as the principal speaker.

The Duquesne Greys were organized August 5, 1831, and were mustered into the service of the state on September 5 of the same year. They served in the Mexican War as Company K of the 1st Pennsylvania Volunteers, in the Civil War as Company B of the 12th Pennsylvania Volunteers, in the Spanish War as the 18th Pennsylvania Volunteers, in the World War as the 111th Regiment of the 28th Division, and since then have been reorganized as the 176th Field Artillery.

The Duquesne Greys have given four mayors to the city. One of their officers, Richard C. Drum, became the Adjutant General of the United States Army. In 1869 they gave a ball in honor of the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII, which is said to have been the greatest social event in Pittsburgh's history.

The regiment served in a number of strikes and on the border in connection with the Mexican trouble just before the entrance of the United States into the World War. In the World War the regiment had 27 officers and 672 men killed in action.

Throughout its colorful history it has conferred credit on Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania and the United States.

Keep Politics Out

The Management of the Juvenile Detention Home Should Be Kept Free From the Gang.

The hunger of the Republican machine for jobs is insatiable. Within the last year or two it has given a politician utterly inexperienced in library work a job as librarian of the Carnegie Library on the North Side, and has attempted to get control of the public schools. And now comes the statement that it sought to take over the management of the Juvenile Detention Home, in order to find more places for its henchmen.

W. H. MacAfee, chairman of the board of the Juvenile Home, states that County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, in violation of a "gentlemen's agreement," had incorporated in the bill authorizing the County Commissioners to construct a new building for the home a provision granting them the right to appoint the staff. The bill was vetoed by Gov. Pinchot because of this provision.

Mr. MacAfee says that badly as the new home is needed it would be a serious blunder to sacrifice staff standards and staff morale in order to secure a modern plant.

He is right.

State Narcotic Laws

Effectiveness of Police Duty Remains Uncertain Without Uniformity in State Legislation.

Addressing the National Conference of Commissions at Atlantic City, Harry J. Anslinger, Federal Commissioner of Narcotics, recommended a uniform state law as an essential move in the repression of the "dope" evil.

Federal law, with farms for addicts, is modern and progressive. State law, said Mr. Anslinger, is chaotic, and in a majority of cases is "ineffective, if not useless."

His appeal to the states was based on both humanitarian and utilitarian grounds. Narcotic addicts, he asserted, pay more than THREE BILLION DOLLARS annually for "dope." To wipe out this enormous and nefarious traffic would result in "a universal economic improvement."

As the commissioner showed further, the Harrison act, however effective, is effective NATIONALLY only. Under the doctrine of state rights, there is a twilight zone which the federal government cannot invade. Police duty in this zone RESTS UPON THE SEPARATE STATES—and without uniformity in state legislation such action remains uncertain.

Some states now have good narcotic laws. The suggested reform ought to be carried on until ALL states have such laws.

On this occasion, as you see, our two old and respectable friends, the elephant and the donkey, can't quite make up their minds, a murrain seizes them.

So far, in our editorial career, we have never harbored an unkind thought. However, if this be unkind, make the most of it.

We say, officially, as guides of public opinion, that if the elephant and donkey fell over the edge of the cliff, and took old Prohibition with them, our tears would be few. Yours also.

This Would Disgust Russia

But Russia May Live to See It, as the United States Sees It Now.

A YOUTHFUL BRITISH COMMONER, MASTER HEADLY, MAKES A PROUD BOW TO ROYALTY AFTER PRESENTING A PURSE.

The lady with the big white hat is the charming Duchess of York, daughter-in-law of King George, who goes everywhere, making herself agreeable, encouraging charity.

The little boy, doing his best to make what some American children would call "a perfectly swell bow," has just handed to the Duchess a purse full of money to help the "Royal Medical Benevolent Fund Guild."

The picture is amusing, but it would probably annoy some of our good friends in Russia. Over there, where they have just discovered "freedom," everybody is the equal of everybody else, with the possible exception of Stalin.

He can have you shot by merely pointing at you, and that is not exactly equality.

But even Russia, inebriated with its first wild drink of freedom, may come to the bowing and scraping once more, as in the days of Czars.

You start out to have all men equal, and then you suddenly discover that inequalities are not due so much to the arrogance of the upper class as to the inborn SERVILITY OF OTHER CLASSES.

Americans may laugh at this little British son of the Common People bending himself double in the presence of Royalty.

But if that same royalty came to the United States, land of glorious freedom, you would see ducking and bowing, and scraping, multiplied "curtsies," pitiful, lickspittle snobbishness, in some of our finest houses, such as was never dreamed of in England.

The Duchess, very polite, would not laugh, but NOT laughing would require an effort.

And she would tell about it when she got home as other titled travelers have done.

It was one thing for Jefferson to write that men are equal in the Declaration of Independence. It is another thing for Americans to believe it. And they don't.

In fact, THEY KNOW that THEY are not equal.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Poet's Love

For me, the sea may lose its lure
Some day; that wide expanse
May lie before me, yet I'll pass
Without a look or glance.

I may forget the clasp of hands
That once held Heaven for me.
I may forget the touch of lips
That brought me ecstasy.

This living is so strange a thing
That it may part us, far;
Though now I hold that life for me
Blooms only where you are,

But never until time be done,
Will this one gladness go.
This joy of weaving singing words
Of lilting measures' flow.

The rest may pass, the lesser joys
That time can only lend;
But words are every poet's dower
To cherish to the end.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Lost your job?
Too bad, partner—
But don't you worry;
You're okey, 'long as you
HAVEN'T LOST YOUR NERVE.

I know what you're saying
Under your breath—
"All right for her to preach—
She's sitting pretty.
What does she know
"About being hungry?
"About waking up at night
"In a cold sweat,
"Wondering how you're going
"To pay the rent?
"What does she know
"About walking up and down
"The same darn streets,
"Day after day—
"Sitting on the same park benches
"Night after night,
"Waiting for—what?
"Wishing you were dead
"'N' out of it all.
"Easy for her to preach—
"What does she know
"About it all?"

What do I know?
Stranger, you'd be surprised!
Why, I was pounding those pavements,
Polishing those benches,
When you were still
Cutting teeth on cookies.
So don't act so offish—
I paid for this dope
I'm giving you—
And it's straight,

You may lose your job—
You may lose your home—
You may lose your figure
And your friends.
But you can't be licked—
UNLESS YOU LOSE YOUR NERVE.

You're wrong!
And that was always
Your biggest asset.
Where'd you get your spunk
Out of you, yourself.

Where'd you get your pride,
Your ambition,
Your smart notions,
Out of you, yourself.

You boasted of it, then—
Boasted that you "had it in you"—
Said that nothing could lick you,
And you believed it.
Sometimes it was almost a game—
Dasting Fate to do her darndest,
Then proving that you could Outsmart her!
Taking chances—
There weren't any chances
Too risky to take, then,
In those days when
You believed in yourself,
AND YOU ALWAYS GOT BY.

Others might two-time you,
Call you a flat tire,
Say you couldn't
Make the grade.

But you never said
Those things to yourself—
Always you believed in yourself,
And always you managed
TO COME OUT ON TOP!

Belief—that was the trick of it.
Faith—it's a curious thing.
That chap that said—
"By faith ye shall move mountains"
Certainly knew his real estate.
Didn't it?
Secret mountains of doubt,
Ignorance—self-consciousness,
All those hidden barriers
That can jail a man for keeps,
Your faith in yourself,
Moved them all,
SET YOU FREE!

Then what's holding you now?
Hard times and depression?
Guess again—
YOUR OWN FEAR—
That's what's holding you,
Your own lack of faith
In yourself.
Bad breaks?
Sure there are—
And you've licked them before,
BECAUSE YOU BELIEVED THAT YOU COULD!
Then believe it again!
You still have your stuff—
Have faith in that stuff!
Make a bet on yourself!
Lift your face from the mud—
Climb back in that ring
AND GET GOING!

Sun-Spot Theory of Albert Einstein

By Archibald Henderson

Perhaps the most singular of the visible solar phenomena, which still remain unexplained by scientists, are sun spots. When examined through a powerful telescope, they appear to be great whorls of gaseous or molten matter. These sun spots pass through a regular cycle, the duration of the changes amounting to about 11 years. During this period, the spots change in size, passing from maximum to minimum, and then back again.

Certainly some powerful forces, of a periodic nature, are at work to cause these sun spots, which are sometimes so huge as to be visible to the naked eye. On the earth we are familiar with the observed facts that, as we descend into the interior, pressure and temperature increase. According to the electron theory, scientists like Eddington have computed the enormous pressures and temperatures which prevail in the sun's interior. The atoms, jostling against each other with inconceivable force and velocity, strip and break each other down. Gravity at the surface of the sun is 27 times as powerful as it is at the surface of the earth. For every mile of descent, astronomers compute that the temperature rises by hundreds of degrees.

The sun is studied by astrophysicists in the three phases of its constitution: the photosphere, the chromosphere and the corona. When we look at the sun with the naked eye, what we see is the photosphere. The chromosphere is a spherical zone surrounding the photosphere, and the corona surrounds all of the sun's outer parts.

On the earth, the North and South poles are regions far colder than the equator. It has been generally assumed hitherto by scientists that the same was the case with the sun. But Einstein, during his recent stay at the Mount Wilson Observatory, advanced the hypothesis that the poles of the sun were hotter than the equator. Thus far scientists have found no difference in temperature on the sun's surface, but researches of a careful nature will now be made to test this more exactly. Einstein, by means of a bar of iron heated by a coil of wire around it, has shown that the ends were hotter than the center. The cyclone of sun spots whirling toward the equator, Einstein suggests, must be caused by a current along the sun's equator. This argues a difference between the sun's equator and its poles.

Text for Today

There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus.—Romans, viii:1.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. MUNDY

Some day you hope to lead a gypsy life for a time.

Some day you want to leave your cares at home and start in the car with your wife and just drift about the country—no special destination—no appointed time for return.

But would you accept the opportunity if it should come to you?

Would you not at once begin planning a trip that would mean a long distance of driving each day?

So many places you have always longed to see.

So much to be crowded into the short time.

Even now when you plan a vacation trip, a short period of two weeks perhaps, you undertake such distances that you are tired enough to go home long before the time is up for returning.

To sleep in your own bed, have the rest and freedom that your own home allows—isn't it better than the itineraries covering many miles and fast driving?

If you are so anxious to take a gypsy trip why not try it out on your free days in summer; then you might find the principal charm in talking about it; in anticipation, the great joy.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Because of New York's pronounced ache of loneliness it offers a greater variety of unusual pets than almost any city on the globe. These do not include dogs, cats, canaries and goldfish so plentiful in every large city.

When I lived at the Ritz there were housed on its roof a 200-pound alligator—the pet of a German countess—and a collection of monkeys brought back from some far flung corner of the world by Billy Leeds, one of the best known of the Broadway play boys.

In the Hotel Majestic, one wing was given over entirely to a collection of squirrels, the especial pets of a famous anthropologist. At one time they numbered more than 400 and aroused officials of the Health Department to demand their removal to a suburb.

For many years, in fair weather, Central Park strollers became accustomed to a striking red haired girl who sat on a bench under a wisteria arbor reading with an enormous white cockatoo perched on her shoulder, squawking and screaming at passersby.

Irene Castle first introduced the marmoset, dropping in one late evening at Bustanoby's, as I recall, with one coyly peeping out her white muff. There are perhaps 25 marmosets serving as pets in Manhattan today, chiefly owned by ladies of the stage.

Pepy de Albrew, former husband of Wilda Bennett, appeared at the Mayfair dance a recent night with a white mouse clinging to his evening coat lapel, and Martin Johnson and his wife now have four young gorillas in their Ninth street apartment, along with a number of apes.

A Harlem voodoo doctor strolls Lenox avenue with a trained skunk on a leash. Ziegfeld's daughter, Patricia, has a baby elephant. In a fire in a Sutton place home this spring a woman rushed back into the flames and returned with three coiling snakes. She is an interior decorator of distinction.

I talked to a man this morning who in the twirling flurry of temporary defeat made two attempts at suicide—putting a pistol to his head before a bathroom mirror and undressing and placing a razor to his throat in a well filled tub. He confessed that upon each occasion he lost courage. He is still obsessed with the idea but with two failures behind him I have an idea he will snap out of it.

What years of public resentment could not accomplish, the economic—and what an over worked word!—collapse may achieve, i. e., the death of the cover charge. Practically all road houses abolished the custom this summer as did a few of the remaining night clubs. It was a polite gyp of the boom days, starting at a dollar at old Reisenweber's and reaching a $5 charge in exclusive spots. In the beginning, it resulted not only in innumerable quarrels, but many rough and tumble fist fights.

On Second avenue today I came upon a fusty fly blown candy store displaying heart-shaped peppermints with such inscriptions as "Love Me," "O. U." and "Ever Thine" traced in flaming red. And because I am a ridiculous old sentimentalist my sluggish heart gave the suggestion of a twitch.

* * *

I invariably receive another sentimental pulsing in passing a cobbler's shop—I mean the cobbler of the old school and not the polished chain shop sort. There is one on 44th street near the East River. A gray haired old gentleman with half spectacles sits on his bench in the muggy dimness. One feels he is the friend of all the neighborhood children and the philosophic friend of many elders. The cobbler shop was once a Shinto shrine of American life—a wayside forum of rural erudition. But in big cities at least it is now only a Greek arcade.

A few blocks from the old cobbler's I noticed the Vitamin Restaurant was closed. And I was reminded that both vitamins and calories as topics of discussion or an ephemeral paragraph had lost ground. What were they all about anyway?

Catch me sometime twirling—two, three, four—in an old fashioned waltz.

Isn't It So?
